5,000 OF REGULAR ARMY EMBARK FOR VERA CRUZ

Funston's Brigade Sailed From Galveston This Afternoon for the Seat of War—Moving Picture Men Made Films of the Embarkation.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Galveston, Texas, April 24.—Five thousand bronzed and acclimated American soldiers comprising the fifth brigade, second division of the United States army, were electrified into sudden activity shortly after midnight by the receipt of orders that meant "on to Mexico." A great cheer went up from the military reservation at Fort Crockett, then the regulars settled down to the task of getting away.

While tents were being struck regimental bands played merry airs. The soldiers paid little attention to the music. They had gotten what they had been wanting—orders to go to the "front."

At dawn the embarkation of the troops on the four transports in the harbor was begun.

The Nineteenth infantry commanded by Col. Millard F. Waltz, boarded the Sumner. This was the first vessel to receive her load of fighting men. Then in rapid order the commands of Col. R. G. Van Vleet, Lieutenant Col. P. W. Moore and Col. Plummer marched on the Meade, Kilpatrick and McClellan.

Before the first private went aboard the transports they had been fully provisioned. Piercing whistles from the vessels had set in motion the necessary machinery for completing the work of loading the ships, a work that had been under way for several days.

Great yellow army automobile trucks tore through the streets to the docks with horns shrieking, taking the final loads of camp supplies. Under the glare of searchlights the men worked rapidly on the docks and big cranes swung the cargoes aboard.

Officers of the quartermaster's department worked without any sleep. On Thursday it was found that the four transports would be insufficient for the task and the army officers immediately opened negotiations for the Mallory liner San Jacinto and the Southern Pacific liner El Cid. The first named merchant steamer will carry troops, the other supplies and cavalry horses.

General Funston announced early in the day that the brigade would be on its way by noon, unless it was decided to await the loading of the artillery. He said that if he decided to wait for the guns the delay would be only a few hours.

Thousands turned out to watch the departure of the troops and a vast cheer went up when the Twenty Eighth infantry under command of Col. E. H. Plummer swung out of the portals of Fort Crockett in a dense fog into Seawall Boulevard and thence across the city to the docks.

Immediately following came the Seventh Infantry, the Nineteenth and the Fourth. The Engineers, hospitals corps and the field batteries had gone aboard during the night.

General Funston accompanied by his personal aid, Lieutenant W. G. Ball, came over from Texas City shortly after daybreak. It was reported that the McClellan had been selected to carry Funston's flag.

A moving picture outfit staged a war drama on the wharf while the men of the twenty-eighth infantry were embarking. The first soldier set his foot on the gangplank at 7:30 and forty five minutes later nearly one half of the twenty-eighth had embarked.

This was made to make their way between huge piles of boxes containing cartridges and tearing the label "wanted" at the destination. Thousands of additional cartridges were loaded, giving the impression that the military authorities, at the last minute, decided that the campaign would be longer than they first thought.

The infantrymen were equipped for heavy marching order, each man carrying 100 rounds of ammunition. Enough rations were provided to supply 3,500 men for ninety days.

LIEUT. M'ENTEE OFF FOR VERA CRUZ

Kingston is represented in the regular army by Lieutenant Girard L. McEntee, son of Mrs. Girard L. McEntee, of West Chestnut street. Mr. McEntee is a first lieutenant in the Seventh Infantry, who have been stationed at Galveston, Texas, for over a year, carrying out the president's policy of "watchful waiting." Lieutenant McEntee's regiment with several others forming the Fifth Brigade was on Thursday night ordered to board transports and sail for Vera Cruz, where they will be the first of the regular army to enter Mexico.

A One-Armed Drunk.

George Woods, a one-armed man, got drunk on Thursday and fell asleep on a porch on West O'Reilly street. Policeman Connelly was sent to the scene and had a hard fight getting the drunk to police headquarters. With assistance Woods was landed in the city hall lockup and this morning pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct. He has a hook on his artificial arm and swung it in threatening fashion when being locked up. Recorder Grogan gave the prisoner five days in jail. He claimed to be on his way to Brown's Station.

Charged With Speeding.

Jacob Goedtel was arrested on Broadway Thursday night by Policeman Daum for running his automobile at an excessive rate of speed. He was arraigned this morning before Recorder Grogan and pleaded not guilty. The case was adjourned until Wednesday morning.

SAUGERTIES ROAD CLOSED FOR REPAIR

The Saugerties road between Schoentag's Hotel and the Glenerie bridge has been closed by County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran for the purpose of allowing the contractors at work resurfacing the road to properly repair it. All traffic between Kingston and Saugerties should go by way of the Flatbush road going past the aims house, until the repairs are completed. In the past it has been found almost impossible for contractors to make repairs with the road in use by traffic and as it would not inconvenience traffic to a great extent by having to detour by way of the Flatbush road Mr. Loughran thought it best to close the stretch of road while work was underway.

Successful Easter Concert.

The school hall of the Spring Street German Lutheran Church was thronged on Wednesday evening with an audience that was delighted with the eleventh annual Easter concert, given under the direction of Prof. Stumpf. There were choruses by the church choir and the church maencher, clever drills and motion songs by the school children, a violin solo by Robert Isemann, a tenor solo by Herman Lature and a soprano solo by Miss Elizabeth Rieser. Perhaps the finest number of the evening was the duet by Miss Rieser and Mr. Lature. As befitted German-Americans, the program was about equally divided between selections in German and in English. An impromptu number was the singing of "America" by the entire assembly, at the suggestion of Pastor Schmidt-konz, producing a volume of sound that must have shaken up the foundations of the building.

TWENTY AND TEN YEARS AGO.

April 24, 1894.—Zelus Stewart died at his home on Cedar street. Jury in LaForge murder case disagreed after being out thirty hours. Miss Jennie Rose and William S. Wright married at Marlborough. Samuel McCordie and Rose Kerby married.

Minstrel Fun Tonight.

There is going to be real fun and lots of it tonight at St. John's parish house when the members of the Young Men's Athletic Club give their first minstrel performance. There will be quips and jests and witty repartee between the end men and the interlocutor; songs by the whole company; more music that will charm all by the male quartet of the church; and the very humorous little plantation play.

Highland Grange Active.

At the meeting of Highland Grange on Tuesday night the first and second degrees were conferred on Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wilkoff and John Schulte. The grange decided to contribute the use of the automobiles of its members to assist the G. A. R. on Memorial Day. Miss Gertrude Peeter, lecturer of the grange, handed in her resignation. Mr. and Mrs. Austin Merritt will speak on tomato growing at the next meeting.

Friday Night Bible Class.

This evening will be the last meeting of the season of the Friday night Bible classes of the Y. M. C. A. As usual the members will meet at the association at 6:30 o'clock when a bean supper will be served. The speaker of the evening will be the Rev. George W. Gulick, superintendent of the Ulster County Sunday School Association.

The I. Y. M. Society.

The regular meeting of the I. Y. M. Society will be held in the basement of the school hall of the Livingston Street Lutheran Church this evening. The following question will be answered: "What trade or profession would you advise a young man to learn in the city of Kingston?"

May Queen Selected.

At a joint meeting of the Senior and Junior Classes of Kingston Academy Thursday afternoon, Miss Ethel Overbaugh was selected as this year's May Queen. The May day festivities will occur on May 8 and will be about the same as in former years.

Excellent Fire Drill.

Fire Chief Chipp paid a visit of inspection to the shirt factory of Millen, Aikenhead & Company on Greenkill avenue this morning and at his suggestion the employees went through a fire drill. The building was emptied in quick time, showing the result of careful training.

Ash Dump Burning.

The ash dump at the end of Fair street got on fire this morning and burned so fiercely that a still alarm was sent in to Wiltwyck House Company about 6 o'clock. The firemen worked for two hours and half before the blaze was extinguished.

The Eagles Won.

The Eagles defeated the West Strands on McVey's field on Thursday afternoon by the score of 7 to 3.

MEXICANS FIRE ON RED CROSS WORKERS

United States Forces Preparing to Hold Vera Cruz Against Attack by Mexicans—Refugees From Mexico City Arrive.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Vera Cruz, April 24.—Machine guns, which were brought ashore from the United States war fleet during the night, were set up today and mounted at strategic points outside the city to prevent any attack by the 5,000 Federals, who are reported to be encamped about twenty miles northwest of Vera Cruz.

The forces under Captain Edwin A. Anderson, of the New Hampshire, which are guarding the southern outskirts and the marines and sailors under Col. John A. Le Jeune, who are guarding the western approaches, were strengthened.

Outposts have been established by the American forces of 6,000 men on the roads leading into the city from the northwest and vigilant watch is kept upon these highways by sentries. Throughout the night the searchlights of the men of war constantly swept the sandy levels stretching westward from the city proper. The work of cleaning up the city is being rushed at the express orders of Rear Admiral Fletcher, who fears an outbreak of disease unless strict sanitary measures are adopted.

The Mexican dead are being buried in the Vera Cruz cemetery or burned along Guerrero street. The corpses that have been burned were unclaimed. The funerals in the Vera Cruz cemetery were conducted by relatives or friends of the Mexicans who fell while resisting the advance of the forces of occupation.

Among the dead are a number of Catholic friars, who turned from the sanctuary of their churches to fight the invaders. Armed with rifles a number of the friars attached to the old monarchical church, La Parroquia, ascended to the belfry of this historic old pile and from this point of vantage fired upon the Americans.

The fighting friars were finally dislodged by a detachment of marines under Ensign Townsend. With automatic pistols in their hands the marines stormed the building, their quick rifles weapons spurring a continuous stream of lead.

Those of the friars left alive conducted the funeral services for the Mexican dead today. And the solemn chant of the funeral service was heard in many a side but where the incense mingled with the odor of flowers.

A refugee train arrived early today from Mexico City and those on board had thrilling stories to tell about conditions in the capital and their anxiety over the long ride to this port.

The seriousness of the situation at Tampico is increasing as a result of the junction of the Federals and Constitutionalists at that point. As a result of wireless reports detailing conditions there, Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, commander of the British squadron, ordered the British consul to proceed to Tampico forthwith to look after British lives and property interests at that point. Practically all of the Americans, British and Germans at that point have gone on board warships or merchantmen.

A number of Mexicans were arrested during the forenoon for firing upon Red Cross workers, who were picking up bodies in the streets or caring for the wounded. The report was circulated, with the evident intention of turning the populace against the Americans, that a number of these prisoners had been executed. Captain Huse, chief of staff to Rear Admiral Fletcher, denied that any prisoners had been put to death, but to newspaper men he said:

"It is not true that any Mexican prisoners have been executed but you may credit the chief of staff as saying that we may have to come to that if these people continue to murder our men."

Refugees from Mexico City went to the United States consulate, where they related exciting stories to Consul Canada. They brought a report that the American flag had been torn down and trampled in the streets of the capital.

They also said that Nelson O'Shaughnessy and his family had disappeared and were said to have gone to Manzanillo on the west coast. The only warship known to be at that port is the Japanese cruiser Idzumi, which has been lying there for several months.

"A number of Americans were injured in the streets and had their lives threatened," said the refugees. "The better class of the Mexican refugees in the capital, however, remained calm and took no part in these demonstrations. They were mostly carried on by students and clerks and natives of low caste, whose sudden patriotism had been inspired by deep potations of liquor. There was a hostile demonstration before the United States embassy but the presence of Federal soldiers there prevented any actual attack. A number of students of the military academy, mere boys, gathered before the national palace and cheered for Huerta."

"American stores have been closed and the few Americans remaining have been advised to remain indoors. They have barricaded their homes and laid in supplies of food and munitions as though for a siege." Admiral Badger today has nearly

6,000 sailors and marines on shore. They are divided into squads, each with a separate task. Some are cleaning up the city, others are acting as guards and sentries while others are continuing the house to house search for hidden "snipers" and secreted war munitions. The work of this last named squad is about completed.

In fact conditions have become so satisfactory that Rear Admiral Fletcher addressed another proclamation to the people of the city saying that unless they resumed the normal course of civil government he would establish a government himself.

One problem that has given the naval authorities much worry is that of securing a supply of good drinking water. When the forces were landed the sailors and marines were instructed not to drink the public water supply for fear it had been poisoned.

An expeditionary force left at daybreak for the public water works to guard it and to make sure that it is kept in working order.

The city continued quiet throughout the night, but the vigilant police precautions of the American naval authorities were not relaxed. As a result of the accidental killing of a marine by a sailor sentinel the commanders issued strict orders to the musters that under no circumstances must they fire upon any one in the darkness, until three challenges had been given. Failure to obey this rule, it was said, would result in severe punishment.

Fortifications are being erected among the sand dunes southwest and northwest of the city. Trenches and rifle pits are being dug and barbed wire and logs and bags filled with sand are being erected both close and distant. Address

ACCO COMPANY

The Americans do not know the harbor. The gunboat Progresso, which was captured by the United States armed forces, was taken without resistance. As soon as the captain saw the enormous fifteen inch guns, any one of which could have blown the Progresso to bits with a single shell, he realized the futility of putting his gunpowder six pounds against the war machinery on the dreadnoughts. Later the Progresso was allowed to depart.

Admiral Cradock informed Rear Admiral Badger that he would be obliged to go to Mexico City at once to investigate conditions there and to bring Charge Hohler to Vera Cruz.

Friendly Mexicans who came into town during the morning reported that General Maas, who fled from this city when the Americans landed, is preparing to go to Pazo Del Macho, near the Oaxaca state line.

Reconnoitering of the railway lines between this city and Mexico City has commenced, a party of marines under Major Smedley Butler going out to make an inspection of the

5,000 OF REGULAR ARMY EMBARK FOR VERA CRUZ

Funston's Brigade Sailed From Galveston This Afternoon for the Seat of War--Moving Picture Men Made Films of the Embarkation.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Galveston, Texas, April 24.—Five thousand bronzed and acclimated American soldiers comprising the fifth brigade, second division of the United States army, were electrified to sudden activity shortly after midnight by the receipt of orders that meant "on to Mexico." A great cheer went up from the military reservation at Fort Crockett, then the regulars settled down to the task of getting away.

While tents were being struck regimental bands played merry airs. The soldiers paid little attention to the music. They had gotten what they had been wanting—orders to go to the "front."

At dawn the embarkation of the troops on the four transports in the harbor was begun.

The Nineteenth Infantry commanded by Col. Millard F. Waltz, boarded the Sumner. This was the first vessel to receive her load of fighting men. Then in rapid order the commands of Col. R. G. Van Vleet, Lieutenant Col. P. W. Moore and Col. Plummer marched on the Meade, Kilpatrick and McClellan.

Before the first private went aboard the transports they had been fully provisioned. Piercing whistles from the vessels had set in motion the necessary machinery for completing the work of loading the ships, a work that had been under way for several days.

Great yellow army automobile trucks tore through the streets to the docks with horns shrieking, taking the final loads of camp supplies. Under the glare of searchlights the men worked rapidly on the docks and big cranes swung the cargoes aboard.

Officers of the quartermaster's department worked without any sleep. On Thursday it was found that the four transports would be insufficient for the task and the army officers immediately opened negotiations for the Mallory liner San Jacinto and the Southern Pacific liner El Cid. The first named merchant steamer will carry troops, the other supplies and cavalry horses.

General Funston announced early in the day that the brigade would be on its way by noon, unless it was decided to await the loading of the artillery. He said that if he decided to wait for the guns the delay would be only a few hours.

Galveston got no sleep after midnight. Thousands turned out to watch the departure of the troops and a vast cheer went up when the Twenty Eighth Infantry under command of Col. E. H. Plummer swung out of the portals of Fort Crockett in a dense fog into Seawall Boulevard and thence across the city to the docks.

Immediately following came the Seventh Infantry, the Nineteenth and the Fourth. The Engineers, hospitals corps and the field batteries had gone aboard during the night.

General Funston accompanied by his personal aid, Lieutenant W. G. Ball, came over from Texas City shortly after daybreak. It was reported that the McClellan had been selected to carry Funston's flag.

A moving picture outfit staged a war drama on the wharf while the men of the twenty-eighth infantry were embarking. The first soldier set his foot on the gangplank at 7:30 and after five minutes later nearly one half of the troops were aboard.

Between huge piles of boxes containing cartridges and bearing the label "wanted at destination," thousands of additional cartridges were loaded, giving the impression that the military authorities, at the last minute, decided that the campaign would be longer than they first thought.

The infantrymen were equipped for heavy marching order, each man carrying 100 rounds of ammunition. Enough rations were provided to supply 3,500 men for ninety days.

LIEUT. M'ENTEE OFF FOR VERA CRUZ

Kingston is represented in the regular army by Lieutenant Girard L. McEntee, son of Mrs. Girard L. McEntee, of West Chestnut street. Mr. McEntee is a first lieutenant in the Seventh Infantry, who have been stationed at Galveston, Texas, for over a year, carrying out the president's policy of "watchful waiting."

Lieut. McEntee's regiment with several others forming the Fifth Brigade was on Thursday night ordered to board transports and sail for Vera Cruz, where they will be the first of the regular army to enter Mexico.

A One-Armed Drunk.

George Wrods, a one-armed man, got drunk on Thursday and fell asleep on a porch on West O'Reilly street. Policeman Connelly was sent to the scene and had a hard fight getting the drunk to police headquarters. With assistance Wrods was landed in the city hall lockup and this morning pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct. He has a hook on his artificial arm and swung it in threatening fashion when being locked up. Recorder Grogan gave the prisoner five days in jail. He claimed to be on his way to Brown's Station.

Charged With Speeding.

Jacob Goedtel was arrested on Broadway Thursday night by Police-Daun for running his automobile at an excessive rate of speed. He was arraigned this morning before Recorder Grogan and pleaded not guilty. The case was adjourned until Wednesday morning.

At Kingston Point Park.

The Kingston Consolidated Railroad Company is fixing up Kingston Point Park in anticipation of the opening of the season. The benches have been repainted and again placed throughout the park and with the grass springing up the park looks very attractive.

Red Monograms' First Game.

SAUGERTIES ROAD CLOSED FOR REPAIR

The Saugerties road between Schoenag's Hotel and the Glenrie bridge has been closed by County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran for the purpose of allowing the contractors at work resurfacing the road to properly repair it. All traffic between Kingston and Saugerties should go by way of the Flatbush road going past the alms house, until the repairs are completed. In the past it has been found almost impossible for contractors to make repairs with the road in use by traffic and as it would not inconvenience traffic to a great extent by having to detour by way of the Flatbush road Mr. Loughran thought it best to close the stretch of road while work was underway.

Successful Easter Concert.

The school hall of the Spring Street German Lutheran Church was thronged on Wednesday evening with an audience that was delighted with the eleventh annual Easter concert, given under the direction of Prof. Stumpf. There were choruses by the church choir and the church members, clever drills and motion songs by the school children, a violin solo by Robert Isenmann, a tenor solo by Herman Lature and a soprano solo by Miss Elizabeth Rieser. Perhaps the finest number of the evening was the duet by Miss Rieser and Mr. Lature. As befitted German-Americans, the program was about equally divided between selections in German and in English. An impromptu number was the singing of "America" by the entire assemblage at the suggestion of Pastor Schmidt, producing a volume of sound that must have shaken up the foundations of the building.

TWENTY AND TEN YEARS AGO.

April 24, 1894.—Zelusius Stewart died at his home on Cedar street. Jury in LaForce murder case disagreed after being out thirty hours. Miss Jennie Rose and William S. Wright married at Marlborough. Samuel McCordie and Rose Kerby married.

There will be quips and jests and witty repartee between the end men and the interlocutor; songs by the whole company; more music that will charm all by the male quartet of the church; and the very humorous little plantation play.

MEXICANS FIRE ON RED CROSS WORKERS

United States Forces Preparing to Hold Vera Cruz Against Attack by Mexicans--Refugees From Mexico City Arrive.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Vera Cruz, April 24.—Machine guns, which were brought ashore from the United States war fleet during the night, were set up today and mounted at strategic points outside the city to prevent any attack by the 5,000 Federals, who are reported to be encamped about twenty miles northwest of Vera Cruz.

The forces under Captain Edwin A. Anderson, of the New Hampshire, which are guarding the southern outskirts and the marines and sailors under Col. John A. Le Jeune, who are guarding the western approaches, were strengthened.

Outposts have been established by the American forces of 6,000 men on the roads leading into the city from the northwest and vigilant watch is kept upon these highways by sentries. Throughout the night the searchlights of the men of war constantly stretched westward from the city proper. The work of cleaning up the city is being rushed at the express orders of Rear Admiral Fletcher, who fears an outbreak of disease unless strict sanitary measures are adopted. The Mexican dead are being buried in the Vera Cruz cemetery or burned along Guerrero street. The corpses that have been buried were unclaimed. The funerals in the Vera Cruz cemetery were conducted by relatives or friends of the Mexicans who fell while resisting the advance of the forces of occupation.

Among the dead are a number of Catholic friars, who turned from the sanctuary of their churches to fight the invaders. Armed with rifles a number of the friars attached to the old parochial church, La Parroquia, ascended to the belfry of this historic old pile and from this point of vantage fired upon the Americans.

The fighting friars were finally dislodged by a detachment of marines under Captain Townsend. With the capture of the belfry, the quick firing weapons pointed a continuous stream of lead.

Those of the friars left alive conducted the funeral services for the Mexican dead today. And the solemn chant of the funeral service was heard in many an adobe hut where the luscious mingled with the odor of flowers.

A refugee train arrived early today from Mexico City and those on board had thrilling stories to tell about conditions in the capital and their anxiety over the long ride to this port. The seriousness of the situation at Tampico is increasing as a result of the junction of the Federals and Constitutionalists at that point. As a result of wireless reports detailing conditions there, Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, commander of the British squadron, ordered the British consul to proceed to Tampico forthwith to look after British lives and property interests at that point.

Practically all of the Americans, Britons and Germans at that point have gone on board warships or merchantmen.

A number of Mexicans were arrested during the forenoon for firing upon Red Cross workers, who were picking up bodies in the streets or caring for the wounded. The report was circulated, with the evident intention of turning the populace against the Americans, that a number of these prisoners had been executed. Captain Huse, chief of staff to Rear Admiral Fletcher, denied that any prisoners had been put to death, but to newspaper men he said:

"It is not true that any Mexican prisoners have been executed but you may credit the chief of staff as saying that we may have to come to that if these people continue to murder our men."

Refugees from Mexico City went to the United States consulate, where they related exciting stories to Consul Canada. They brought a report that the American flag had been torn down and trampled in the streets of the capital.

They also said that Nelson O'Shaughnessy and his family had disappeared and were said to have gone to Manzanillo on the west coast. The only warship known to be at that port is the Japanese cruiser Iwano, which has been lying there for several months.

"A number of Americans were injured in the streets and had their lives threatened," said the refugees. "The better class of the Mexican citizenry in the capital, however, remained calm and took no part in these demonstrations. They were mostly carried on by students and clerks and natives of low caste, whose sudden patriotism had been inspired by deep potations of liquor. There was a hostile demonstration before the United States embassy but the presence of Federal soldiers there prevented any actual attack. A number of students of the military academy, mere boys, gathered before the national palace and cheered for Huerta."

"American stores have been closed and the few Americans remaining have been advised to remain indoors. They have barricaded their homes and laid in supplies of food and munitions as though for a siege."

Admiral Badger today has nearly

6,000 sailors and marines on shore. They are divided into squads, each with a separate task. Some are cleaning up the city, others are acting as guards and sentries while others are continuing the house to house search for hidden snipers and secreted war munitions. The work of this last named squad is about completed.

In fact conditions have become so satisfactory that Rear Admiral Fletcher addressed another proclamation to the people of the city saying that unless they resumed the normal course of civil government he would establish a government himself.

One problem that has given the naval authorities much worry is that of securing a supply of good drinking water. When the forces were landed the sailors and marines were instructed not to drink the public water supply for fear it had been poisoned. An expeditionary force left at daybreak for the

NEW LIFE.

After one suffers for months from acid dyspepsia, sour stomach, and then finds the remedy is in getting the right kind of food, it is something to speak about.

A New York lady and her young son had such an experience and she wants others to know how to get relief. She writes:

"For about fifteen months my little boy and myself had suffered with sour stomach. We were unable to retain much of anything we ate.

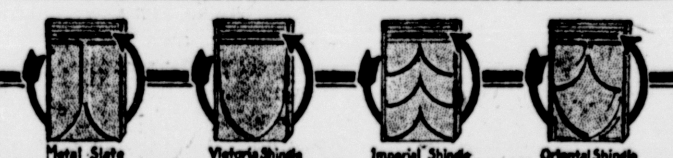

"After suffering in this way for so long I decided to consult a specialist in stomach diseases. Instead of prescribing drugs, he put us both on Grape-Nuts and we began to improve immediately.

"It was the key to a new life. I found we had been eating too much heavy food which we could not digest. In a few weeks after commencing Grape-Nuts I was able to do my house work. I wake in the morning with a clear head and feel rested and have no sour stomach. My boy sleeps well and wakes with a laugh.

"We have regained our lost weight and continue to eat Grape-Nuts for both the morning and evening meals. We are well and happy and owe it to Grape-Nuts."

AMERICANS LEAVE NORTHERN MEXICO

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chihuahua City, Mexico, April 24.—The rush of Americans from the territory controlled by the Constitutionalists to the United States border is in full swing today. Hundreds of Americans and their families are making all possible haste to get to United States soil before there is an actual declaration of war between the United States and Mexico.

Two hundred Americans and their families from Madera and Pearson were marooned in the mountains by the derailment of the train. The train was being run by way of Chihuahua City as it was impossible to go direct to Juarez because the Cumbre tunnel on the national line is still blocked with the debris which choked the bore when the tunnel was blown up by Maximo Castillo, the bandit chief.

The suggestion was made that troops be sent to guard the Americans, but it was decided that they were in no immediate danger, the country being sparsely settled at the point where the accident occurred. It was believed that by tonight the refugees would be in Chihuahua City or else on their way to El Paso.

WAR NEWS.

War with Mexico has begun. Soft words and diplomatic sentences in congressional resolutions and presidential messages may seek to disguise the fact, but the landing of the marines in Vera Cruz actually began the war that was inevitably to come some time. Of the progress of this war people demand information that can be given to them only by the newspapers. In the matter of supplying this demand there will probably be as wide a variance in methods as there was in the Spanish-American war in 1898. For that portion of the public that has an insatiable appetite for sensation and horror the sensational yellow journals will undoubtedly continue to provide. It is their mission to feed the credulity of the thoughtless and ignorant by screaming about the ordinary or inventing sensations and thrilling but impossible speculations when nothing has occurred.

For the sane and intelligent portion of the public other papers—real newspapers—will print the facts as they occur. The Freeman will continue in this class, for various reasons, one of which is that it is more useful and honorable to tell the truth than to furnish made-to-order sensations. Another reason is that The Freeman has found this course to pay. It does not seek the transient support of the hysterical and it does not believe that a circulation obtained among the gullible is lasting or of any value to advertisers even while it does last.

For these reasons The Freeman will continue in its established policy of publishing a newspaper for thinking people who desire to read sanely written and accurate accounts of actual happenings at the earliest possible moment. It will not fill its pages with poster type announcements of imaginings or facts of little relative importance. In its regular editions it will give the news up to within 20 minutes of the time the paper appears on the streets. It will not get out extras without reason but should occasion arise, it is prepared to place an extra edition on the streets in a very minute after the receipt of important news. But there will be no Freeman extra without something to justify it. If you hear newsworthy calling out a Freeman extra you may be sure that something of importance has really happened. The Freeman intends to maintain its own sanity and do all in its power to maintain the sanity of the public. For the sensation lovers there are plenty of papers sold in Kingston five or six hours after they have been printed, with front pages that look like a circus poster and "news" that has very little relation to actual occurrences.

The friendly attitude of the Wilson administration toward the particular band of brigands who call themselves Constitutionalists is being rewarded by the nominal head of the band demanding that the United States evacuate Vera Cruz. The actual head, General Villa, is professing great friendship for the United States and has made a trip to Juarez, on the frontier, for the ostensible purpose of telling the United States consul there how much he loves the people of the United States. This would be more convincing were it not for the fact that the greater part of General Villa's army is rushing toward the border, shouting curses at the "Gringos." The people of El Paso and other towns along this side of the Mexican border are demanding protection, in the face of General Villa's professions of friendship, evidently being very skeptical of the good faith of any Mexican professions. The people along the border have firsthand knowledge of the atrocities committed by Federal and Constitutionalists alike during the "watchful waiting" period at Washington. They realize that war with Mexico will be war with treacherous, bloodthirsty savages who have inherited all of the vices and few of the virtues of the assorted races from which they have sprung, and it is not surprising that they regard with suspicion the good faith of a man who talks peace and is followed by an army of mongrel bandits who have in the past violated every rule of decency and civilized warfare.

HIS PENALTY.

The last legislature of Wisconsin passed an anti-gossip law, and the first person to be caught in its toils is—a man!

This perpetrator of slanderous gossip was found guilty by a jury and he faces a term of a year in jail, or a fine of $250. Not even his confident assertion that his remarks were true was sufficient to save him from conviction and the bold, bad Gossip will have ample opportunity to reflect upon the grievous wrong to a neighbor.

Does one little swallow make a summer? Indeed and indeed, not so! If it did we would say: There, now! See how women have been maligned all through the years. Called the gossips of the world, happy if only they might find a sweet little morsel of "news" to pass on and on, no matter whom it might harm, when all the time they only indulged in mild little talks over the tea-cups, while the real culprits were carefully concealed! And we would add that at last justice had come into its own, for we never had believed that slanderous story about women.

Yes, it takes more than one swallow to bring the good summertime, but, perhaps we may safely admit that one little bird is suggestive. It proves not a thing, but it leads us to say that gossips are pretty evenly divided, and it gives force to the assertion that a bad habit like gossiping is not parceled out with any regard to sex, but is self-acquired by the man or woman who wants to acquire it. And whenever we hear about a lot of "gossiping old ladies" we shall significantly turn the light upon the poor Wisconsin victim of his own misdoings and then we shall add, as said of crime.

There is no sex gossip!

But, more's the pity, there are women and there are men who do reckon with the full offensiveness of the thing when they lightly blast a reputation or simply throw a mean little fling. Perhaps if they did they would not speak so lightly. And perhaps, with a law, they might remember; although it does seem a bit ridiculous to attempt to legislate folk into being good, or to remind them of their moral duties to their neighbors. Yet, if women over their tea-cups and men over their something else, must measure their words with an eye upon the law, and the choice of the jail or a pretty little fine, they certainly would speak more softly and more kindly of their neighbors.

For it is one thing to gossip, quite another to pay for the despicable license, and it is despicable to strike a person with a word, a word that comes at the bidding of—but what is it that prompts folk to gossip?

Is it jealousy? Sometimes. Thoughtlessness? Quite often. Malice? That often takes a hand. And a trace of meanness? Rather more than a trace.

Unkindness? Yes, a needless hurt always reveals the hand of unkindness.

Anything else? None but the gossip can answer.

But always there's an aftermath, though it may be a bit slow in coming.

For it follows, "as the night the day," that friends slip away as a just enough penalty for gossip, for not all penalties are meted out by the law. Folk may lend a listening, oftentimes an interested ear, as an unworthy story hastens along, or they may inwardly protest at the telling; but when the story is over, then comes the penalty, the distrust that is bound to slip in. Because, when the ins and outs of a story are carried to an unbecomingly finish, listeners may applaud or condemn, according to the temper of their minds or their hearts, but they never fail to grow rightly suspicious that they may be the next to be grilled. For there's the certainty that the gossip is not over-fussy in the choice of a target.

And, since all of us are very tender of ourselves, our pride easily hurt, we grow to despise the wretched habit and we fear even a seeming friend who comes bearing unsavory news, for we have our own vulnerable spots which the gossip may find if he will. They may be nothing more than the little human weaknesses of which we are conscious, but which grow very big in appearance when held up to ridicule by a cold, relentless critic; or they may be something more vital.

And beside, do you recall what someone says?

"The gossip in the house always decreases as the library increases."

FRANCES SHAFFER.

Mannerly Girls.

A tall young man with a distinctly English bearing was pacing the front veranda at one of the fashionable hotels at Atlantic City not long ago. Suddenly he came to a stop, readjusted his eyeglass and turned to an acquaintance who was standing by.

"Bah Jove," said he, "all the girls around here smile at me!"

"Well, that shows that they have some manners," quietly returned the other. "Anywhere else they would laugh outright."—Detroit Free Press.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

You can't fool the angels by hollering halleluia.—Atlanta Constitution.

"Is there much competition in your office?" asked Miss Skittles. "Sure," replied the facetious Miss Skids. "Between the mirror and the clock."—Puck.

"Do you believe in women in the home coming to the front?" "You can't prevent 'em if there's a wedding in the neighborhood."—Baltimore American.

Jail Visitor (sympathetically)—"You poor man! You'll be glad when your time is up, won't you?" Convict—"Not particularly, miss. I'm in for life."—Boston Transcript.

"What sort of a man is Bliggins?" "Bliggins is the sort of man who is so confident of his superior mendacity that he'll believe anything you tell him if you'll believe anything he tells you."—Washington Star.

First Clubman—"Well, how are you?" Second Clubman—"Er-so, perhaps. Last week I thought I was in for rheumatic fever, but just managed to stave it off, and today a twinge in my left shoulder suggests—well, it may be neuritis or—"

First Clubman—"My dear chap, I didn't mean it literally."—Punch.

Not Alone in This.

Nearly every man in the United States Navy is turning his eyes these days toward Josephus Daniels, the Secretary of the Navy, who is working out some very radical and homespun measures which may turn life on a battleship entirely upside down.

He never got over being a country person, and doesn't care a bit how much he is joshed on the subject. He knows he was just built to be a country editor, regardless of the fact that the President depends on him to keep the Stars and Stripes aloft on the high seas.

He had an experience at his first public dinner in Washington which proved to him that he just ought to stay at home. On his arrival at the banquet hall a distinguished-looking foreigner came forward. The Hon. Josephus bowed with true southern courtesies.

"I am glad to see you here," he said. "It is gratifying that foreigners of distinction should take an interest in our politics; we are a new people, sir, but—"

The distinguished foreigner uttered no word but this: "Number, please."

"Number?" ejaculated the Hon. Josephus.

"Yes, your seat number."

"What are you a waiter?"

"Yes, if you please."

"Then they ought to change your uniform so you can be distinguished from guests of honor!" muttered the Secretary of the Navy.—Washington Star.

A Wise Youth.

A small boy had been vaccinated, and after the operation the doctor prepared to bandage the sore arm, but the boy objected.

"Put it on the other arm, doctor."

"Why, no," said the physician. "I want to put the bandage on your sore arm, so the boys at school won't hit you on it."

"Put it on the other arm, Doc," reiterated the small boy; "you don't know the fellows at our school."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Wasted Energy.

"I think I'm rightfully entitled to the presidency of the Wasted Energy Club," remarked Representative Allen Treadway of Massachusetts. "In closing my campaign last fall with a tour through my district I sallied forth gayly one morning after telephoning my lieutenants at the town of B—that I would arrive there punctually at 3 o'clock that afternoon to deliver an address."

"An hour later, as my car topped a hill, I saw a charming valley stretched off to my right. Turning down into it I commenced my electioneering work."

"Never had I met such genial folk. Every one seemed ready to listen to me with a smile as soon as I made known my mission. Charmed with this reception, I forgot the flight of time until suddenly found it was about 4 o'clock and I was a dozen miles from B—"

"When I chugged into it I found the remnants of a reception committee awaiting me."

"I'm late, boys," I said, cheerily, "but I've done a capital day's work back in the country here."

"Have you been electioneering up that road you just came down?" inquired the committee spokesman in sour tones.

"Yes," I replied, "and I've got that section solid. Every man of them promised that, at least, he would not vote against me."

"I guess not!" rasped the spokesman. "You've been electioneering all day across the State line over in Vermont!"—Washington Star.

Could Hold Him.

Jeremiah Corcoran and his horse and buggy were a familiar combination on the streets—or street—of Hometown. One day the nag caught the driver napping and started off on a gallop, with Jerry tugging valiantly at the reins.

"What's the matter, Jerry?" called an acquaintance from the sidewalk.

"Can't you hold him?"

"Sure, I can hold him," shouted Jerry, still tugging at the line; "but I can't stop him."—Judge.

Skimpy.

A contributor to the American Magazine tells the following story:

"A clerk in one of the great jewelry stores on Fifth avenue, in New York city, exhibited to a rich and weary customer a lady's handbag, five inches square, made of platinum and fairly well covered on one side only with diamonds. The price was $9,000. The fact that one side only was covered with diamonds troubled the customer. Turning the handbag around and around and looking at it from all sides over and over, he finally said: 'Very pretty, really. But I don't like one side without diamonds. Honestly, the thing looks skimpy—rather skimpy.' At an additional expense of $7,000 this difficulty was removed."

WAR NEWS.

War with Mexico has begun. Soft words and diplomatic sentences in congressional resolutions and presidential messages may seek to disguise the fact, but the landing of the marines in Vera Cruz actually began the war that was inevitably to come some time. Of the progress of this people demand information that can be given to them only by the newspapers. In the matter of supplying this demand there will probably be as wide a variance in methods as there was in the Spanish-American war in 1898. For that portion of the public that has an insatiable appetite for sensation and horror the sensational yellow journals will undoubtedly continue to provide. It is their mission to feed the credulity of the thoughtless and ignorant by screaming about the ordinary or inventing sensations and thrilling but impossible speculations when nothing has occurred.

For the sane and intelligent portion of the public other papers—real newspapers—will print the facts as they occur. The Freeman will continue in this class, for various reasons, one of which is that it is more useful and honorable to tell the truth than to furnish made-to-order sensations. Another reason is that The Freeman has found this course to pay. It does not seek the transient support of the hysterical and it does not believe that a circulation obtained among the gullible is lasting or of any value to advertisers even while it lasts.

For these reasons The Freeman will continue in its established policy of publishing a newspaper for thinking people who desire to read sanely written and accurate accounts of actual happenings at the earliest possible moment. It will not fill its pages with poster type announcements of imaginings or facts of little relative importance. In its regular editions it will give the news up to within 20 minutes of the time the paper appears on the streets. It will not get out extras without reason but should occasion arise, it is prepared to place an extra edition on the streets in a very minute after the receipt of important news. But there will be no Freeman extra without something to justify it. If you hear newsboys calling out a Freeman extra you may be sure that something of importance has really happened. The Freeman intends to maintain its own sanity and do all in its power to maintain the sanity of the public. For the sensation lovers there are plenty of papers sold in Kingston five or six hours after they have been printed, with front pages that look like a circus poster and "news" that has very little relation to actual occurrences.

The friendly attitude of the Wilson administration toward the particular band of brigands who call themselves Constitutionalists is being rewarded by the nominal head of the band demanding that the United States evacuate Vera Cruz. The actual head, General Villa, is professing great friendship for the United States and has made a trip to Juarez, on the frontier, for the ostensible purpose of telling the United States consul there how much he loves the people of the United States. This would be more convincing were it not for the fact that the greater part of General Villa's army is rushing toward the border, shouting curses at the "Gringos." The people of El Paso and other towns along this side of the Mexican border are demanding protection, in the face of General Villa's professions of friendship, evidently being very skeptical of the good faith of any Mexican professions. The people along the border have first-hand knowledge of the atrocities committed by Federal and Constitutionalists alike during the "watchful waiting" period at Washington. They realize that war with Mexico will be war with treacherous, bloodthirsty savages who have inherited all of the vices and few of virtues of the assorted races from which they have sprung, and it is not surprising that they regard with suspicion the good faith of a man who talks peace and is followed by an army of mongrel bandits who have in the past violated every rule of decency and civilized warfare.

HIS PENALTY.

The last legislature of Wisconsin passed an anti-gossip law, and the first person to be caught in its toils is—a man!

This perpetrator of slanderous gossip was found guilty by a jury and he faces a term of a year in jail, or a fine of $250. Not even his confident assertion that his remarks were true was sufficient to save him from conviction and the bold, bad Gossip will have ample opportunity to reflect upon the grievous wrong to a neighbor.

Does one little swallow make a summer? Indeed and indeed, not so. If it did we would say: There, now! See how women have been maligned all through the years. Called the gossips of the world, happy if only they might find a sweet little morsel of "news" to pass on and on, no matter whom it might harm, when all the time they only indulged in mild little talks over the teacups, while the real culprits were carefully concealed! And we would add that at last justice had come into its own, for we never had believed that slanderous story about women.

Yes, it takes more than one swallow to bring the good summertime, but, perhaps we may safely admit that one little bird is suggestive. It proves not a thing, but it leads us to say that gossips are pretty evenly divided, and it gives force to the assertion that a bad habit like gossiping is not parceled out with any regard to sex, but is self-acquired by the man or woman who wants to acquire it. And whenever we hear about a lot of "gossiping old ladies" we shall significantly turn the light upon the poor Wisconsin victim of his own misdoings and then we shall add, as said of crime.

There is no sex gossip!

But, more's the pity, there are women and there are men who do reckon with the full offensiveness of the thing when they lightly blast a reputation or simply throw a mean little fling. Perhaps if they did they would not speak so lightly.

And perhaps, with a law, they might remember; although it does seem a bit ridiculous to attempt to legislate folk into being good, or to remind them of their moral duties to their neighbors. Yet, if women over their teacups and men over their something else, must measure their words with an eye upon the law, and the choice of the jail or a pretty little fine, they certainly would speak more softly and more kindly of their neighbors.

For it is one thing to gossip, quite another to pay for the despicable license, and it is despicable to strike a person with a word, a word that comes at the bidding of—but what is it that prompts folk to gossip?

Is it jealousy? Sometimes. Thoughtlessness? Quite often. Malice? That often takes a hand. And a trace of meanness? Rather more than a trace.

Unkindness? Yes, a needless hurt always reveals the hand of unkindness.

Anything else? None but the gossip can answer.

But always there's an aftermath, though it may be a bit slow in coming.

For it follows, "as the night day," that friends slip away as a just enough penalty for gossip, for not all penalties are meted out by the law. Folk may lend a listening, oftentimes an interested ear, as an unworthy story hastens along, or they may inwardly protest at the telling; but when the story is over, then comes the penalty, the distrust that is bound to slip in. Because, when the ins and outs of a story are carried to an unbecoming finish, listeners may applaud or condemn, according to the temper of their minds or their hearts, but they never fail to grow rightly suspicious that they may be the next to be grilled. For there's the certainty that the gossip is not over-fussy in the choice of a target.

And, since all of us are very tender of ourselves, our pride easily hurt, we grow to despise the wretched habit and we fear even a seeming friend who comes bearing unsavory news, for we have our own vulnerable spots which the gossip may find if he will. They may be nothing more than the little human weaknesses of which we are conscious, but which grow very big in appearance when held up to ridicule by a cold, relentless critic; or they may be something more vital.

And beside, do you recall what someone says?

"The gossip in the house always decreases as the library increases."
FRANCES SHAFFER.

Mannerly Girls.

A tall young man with a distinctly English bearing was pacing the front veranda at one of the fashionable hotels at Atlantic City not long ago. Suddenly he came to a stop, readjusted his eyeglass and turned to an acquaintance who was standing by.

"Bah, Jove," said he, "all the girls around here smile at me!"
"Well, that shows that they have some manners," quietly returned the other. "Anywhere else they would laugh outright."—Detroit Free Press.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

You can't fool the angels by hollering halleluia.—Atlanta Constitution.

"Is there much competition in your office?" asked Miss Skittles. "Sure," replied the facetious Miss Skids. "Between the mirror and the clock."—Puck.

"Do you believe in women in the home coming to the front?" "You can't prevent 'em if there's a wedding in the neighborhood."—Baltimore American.

Jail Visitor (sympathetically)—"You poor man! You'll be glad when your time is up, won't you?" Corvict—"Not particularly, miss. I'm in for life."—Boston Transcript.

"What sort of a man is Bliggins?" "Bliggins is the sort of man who is so confident of his superior mendacity that he'll believe anything you tell him if you'll believe anything he tells you."—Washington Star.

First Clubman—"Well, how are you?" Second Clubman—"Ers—so, perhaps. Last week I thought I was in for rheumatic fever, but just managed to stave it off, and today a twinge in my left shoulder suggests—well, it may be neuritis or—"

First Clubman—"My dear chap, I didn't mean it literally."—Punch.

Not Alone in This.

Nearly every man in the United States Navy is turning his eyes these days toward Josephus Daniels, the Secretary of the Navy, who is working out some very radical and home-spun measures which may turn life on a battleship entirely upside down. He never got over being a country person, and doesn't care a bit how much he is joshed on the subject. He knows he was just built to be a country editor, regardless of the fact that the President depends on him to keep the Stars and Stripes afloat on the high seas.

He had an experience at his first public dinner in Washington which proved to him that he "just ought to stay at home." On his arrival at the banquet hall a distinguished-looking foreigner came forward. The Hon. Josephus bowed with true southern courtesies.

"I am glad to see you here," he said. "It is gratifying that foreigners of distinction should take an interest in our politics; we are a new people, sir, but—"

The distinguished foreigner uttered no word but this:

"Number, please."

"Number?" ejaculated the Hon. Josephus.

"Yes, your seat number."

"What are you a waiter?"

"Yes, if you please."

"Then they ought to change your uniform so you can be distinguished from guests of honor!" muttered the Secretary of the Navy.—Washington Star.

A Wise Youth.

A small boy had been vaccinated, and after the operation the doctor prepared to bandage the sore arm, but the boy objected.

"Put it on the other arm, doctor."

"Why, no," said the physician. "I want to put the bandage on your sore arm, so the boys at school won't hit you on it."

"Put it on the other arm, Doc," reiterated the small boy; "you don't know the fellows at our school."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Wasted Energy.

"I think I'm rightfully entitled to the presidency of the Wasted Energy Club," remarked Representative Allen Treadway of Massachusetts. "In closing my campaign last fall with a tour through my district I sallied forth gayly one morning after telephoning my lieutenants at the town of B—that I would arrive there punctually at 3 o'clock that afternoon to deliver an address."

"An hour later, as my car topped a hill, I saw a charming valley stretched off to my right. Turning down into it I commenced my electioneering work."

"Never had I met such genial folk. Every one seemed ready to listen to me with a smile as soon as I made known my mission. Charmed with this reception, I forgot the flight of time until suddenly found it was about 4 o'clock and I was a dozen miles from B—"

"When I chugged into it I found the remnants of a reception committee awaiting me."

"I'm late, boys," I said, cheerily, "but I've done a capital day's work back in the country here."

"Have you been electioneering up that road you just come down?" inquired the committee spokesman in sour tones.

"Yes," I replied, "and I've got that section solid. Every man of them promised that, at least, he would not vote against me."

"I guess not!" rasped the spokesman. "You've been electioneering all day across the State line over in Vermont!"—Washington Star.

Why Not Ham?

He had held forth for so long on the subject of his adventures that the entire smoking room was distinctly bored. Finally he reached India. "It was there that I first saw a man-eating tiger," he announced boastfully. "Pooh! that's nothing," said a mild-looking little man, edging toward the door. "I once saw a man eating rabbit." ### OUR DAILY PATTERN.

9919—A Most Attractive and Becoming Gown—Ladies' Costume With Long or Shorter Sleeve (In Raised or Normal Waistline, and With or Without Tunic).

Embroidered poplin in a new shade of neil rose would be pretty for this design, with a vest of white tucked chiffon or shadow lace. The design is also good for voile, batiste, gingham, linens, crepe, duvetyne, cloth or silk. Navy blue chiffon taffeta with trimming of tan or green, or bordered goods in any of the prevailing materials, are also nice for this. The waist is in surplus style, and may be finished with short or long sleeve, and with a plain or tunic skirt. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 6 1/2 yards of 44 inch material for a 36 inch size. The skirt measures 1 1/2 yard at the foot.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Catalogue Notice.

Send 10 cents in silver or stamps for our up to date 1914 Spring and Summer Catalogue, containing over 400 designs of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Patterns; also a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, giving valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

Last winter was the coldest that has been known in Florida in many years. There were only a few frosts, but of the time the thermometer registered a low temperature and there was a heavier rainfall than Florida has had in a long time. ## Six Weeks to Build

It takes six weeks to build Reo the Fifth from the steel to the finished car. And it took 27 years to learn how.

The factory cost is one-fourth more than if built by some other standards. Yet the price this year is $1,175 equipped.

Note the result of this extra time, this extra care and cost. Go over the finished car. Then judge if you want your next car built like this.

For Experienced Motorists

Reo the Fifth is built for men who have learned their lessons about poorly-built cars. Men who have paid the extra upkeep, met the troubles and made the repairs.

It is for men who have seen cars grow noisy and old after a few months' use. Who have seen hidden flaws develop. Who have found some parts too weak for sudden shocks. And who know the annoyances due to makers' mistakes.

It is also for men who wish to escape those lessons. Men who want cars to stay new. Men who buy a car to keep and want years of perfect service.

We who have built cars since the dawn of this industry, tell you that such cars must be built like this.

Reo Extremes

In Reo the Fifth, the chief materials are made to specifications based on 10,000-mile tests. All steel is made to formula, and each lot is analyzed twice.

In driving parts we ascertain the needed strength, then add 50 per cent as a margin of safety.

No chances are taken. One whole building in our factory group is devoted to tests and analyses.

We use in this car 15 roller bearings. We use 190 drop forgings to avoid risk of flaws.

We use a costly clutch so no clashing of gears will ever strain the transmission. All our gear-shifting is done with one small rod—by a three-inch movement of the hand.

Close-fitting parts are ground over and over—ground by special machines—to give utter exactness. Large tires are used to lessen the cost of upkeep. Our electric starter is the best we know.

Radical Tests

Our gears are tested in a crushing machine for 75,000 pounds per tooth. Our springs are tested for 100,000 vibrations.

Each engine gets days of testing in unusual ways. Then each tested engine is taken apart and inspected.

In our slow process of building, countless tests and inspections are applied to every part of the car.

Then for years we have kept test cars on the road. We run them night and day at high speed on rough roads, to bring out any weakness. After 10,000 miles, these test cars are taken apart and inspected. And we require that vital parts, after all that rough service, shall show slight evidence of wear.

Each part in this car, each formula for material is based on those radical tests.

Lines and Finish

This year's model has the streamline body, the coming vogue. It has demountable rims, dimming searchlights, a new tire carrier, instruments set flush with the dash. The finish is perfect, the upholstery deep and covered with genuine leather. In beauty, comfort and perfect equipment it meets all the ideals of the time.

$220 Saved

Yet this year's model costs you $220 less than last year's model with electric equipment. The main reason is that all our special machinery has been charged against previous output. For years our whole output has been confined to this chassis, and the resulting saving is now taken from our price.

The demand for this car, at nearly all times, is far in excess of our output. At times it is five times our output. And that demand is growing all the time as men find this car out. This year's model has broken all of our sales records.

So you will be wise to make early decision if you want a car built like this.

15c GALLON

We are prepared to supply Gasoline at above price equal to any made by other than the Standard Oil Co. Careful tests and several years' experience have proven to us that up to this date the Standard Oil Co. furnishes the most reliable fuel for motor cars. Our experiences with Gasoline made by other manufacturers show that it supplies less power, quickly carbonizes the motor and causes an owner much more expense in the end that the slight difference in cost saves at first. We sell Standard Oil Gasoline at 20c per gallon.

TRYING OUT FOR K. A. TRACK TEAM

Pedestrians on some of the uptown streets were somewhat surprised Wednesday afternoon to see a group of K. A. track men jogging serenely along the pavements and braving the cutting wind in their rather abbreviated track uniforms. Captain French issued the call for candidates and a goodly number responded, and although almost all are new men, a good team should be developed.

The distance men intend to do their training on the streets this year as the small track on the K. A. campus is entirely too small and the sharp turns have been the cause of many a "Charlie Horse." The candidates for this year's squad are as follows:

Long distance running—Britt, Taylor, Bishop, Burroughs, Hughes, Smith and Cahill.

Sprints—Carl, French, Cook, Pleasants, Stinson Jones, Wheeler and Lebert.

Shot Put—Cook, Pleasants and French.

The team will be strong in at least one event this year as "Bill" Cook will again put the shot. Bill broke the K. A. record last year and intends to better his own achievement again this year.

Mrs. Henry Burton called on Mrs. Libbie Vedder of Veteran Sunday afternoon.

A. W. Spell of Phoenixia took an automobile party of three to Kingston last Wednesday to do some shopping. They were returning home in the evening when that heavy storm came up. The rain and hail came with such force and the night was so dark that the chauffeur could not see where he was going and evidently the car skidded and ran part way in the ditch and nearly into a telephone pole. The wheels of the car were so buried in the mud that it was impossible to pull it out with a team of heavy horses. After telephoning to their relatives the party spent the night at Edward Bishop's and in the morning the car was soon piled out and the happy joy riders were once more homeward bound. They reached Phoenixia about 11 o'clock without any more bad luck.

USE FOR ROMEYN PROPERTY.

County Will Utilize Old Stone House For Offices.

The action taken by the board of supervisors in authorizing the board of county auditors, better known as the supply committee of the board, to solicit bids for alterations to be made in the Romeyn building on John street at the special meeting of the board last week, was a good one and will place several of the county officials under one roof. The building was recently purchased by the county and is occupied by Mrs. Detmeyer as a boarding house. It is expected that she will vacate the building by the first of May and it will probably be the first of June occupancy after alterations are completed.

On the first floor will be located the county pathological laboratory. The office of County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran on Main street will also be located in the Romeyn building. The county at the present time is paying $240 a year rent for the office of the county superintendent.

The office of the county sealer of weights and measures will also be located in the building and the office of the Ulster county farm bureau.

The board of elections office on the second floor of the court house will also be removed to the Romeyn building. The room now used by the board as an office will likely be turned into a retiring room for the presiding judge sitting at the terms of court held at the court house. At the present time there is no place where is visiting judge holding court can retire to when court is not sitting. Several of the supreme court judges have remarked this fact notably Judge Rudd, who is of the opinion that the entire court room should be remodeled.

The other frame buildings on John street will be torn down and the board at the special meeting passed a resolution that the frame buildings be put up at public auction and sold to the highest bidder on May 5. Whoever buys the buildings must tear them down within 30 days and fill in and grade the property.

LURED BY BEAUTY

Women to Whose Rare Loveliness Mobs Paid Homage.

ONE MAID WHO CAUSED A RIOT

The Charm of Julie Durrier Was Such That a Surging Crowd, Eager For a View of Her Face, Wrecked a Cafe. Peerless Countess Castiglione.

"They can't walk in the park," wrote Horace Walpole of the beautiful Gunning in 1761, "or go to Vauxhall, but such mobs follow them that they are generally driven away." Elizabeth, Maria and Kitty Gunning were three beautiful sisters who, coming over from Ireland in 1750, took London by storm. Nor was the furore that their beauty created of brief duration, for nine years later we read in the London Chronicle of Maria Gunning, by that time Countess of Coventry, and Lady Waldegrave, "that two ladies of distinction (who had, it seems, been in company with the mob, as the phrase is, the Sunday before) walked up and down the walks of St. James' park, preceded by soldiers from the guard—a precaution which gave no small offense to the rest of the company, who were frequently obliged to go out of their path to make way for the procession."

Equally potent was the beauty of the Countess de Castiglione, who, at her first appearance at a ball given by Napoleon III. at the Tuilleries, created such a sensation on her entrance that the dancers stopped motionless and the strains of the band ceased, guests and musicians all pressing forward in their eagerness to catch a glimpse of the newcomer. Wherever she went afterward her peerless loveliness produced a like effect, people climbing on to chairs and benches to see her pass, while when, in 1862, she visited the London opera the audience stood upon the seats and struggled for every place of vantage from which to gaze upon the lovely Florentine.

Fanny Murray about the middle of the eighteenth century was one of the toasts of the town. Her beauty was beyond question and created such a stir at Tunbridge Wells, whither she went to drink the waters, as to necessitate the formation of a special guard of her admirers, who kept off the crowds that flocked and pressed around her when she walked on the Pantiles and other public resorts. Indeed, such was the fame of her beauty that from miles around the country folk came in wagons, carts or any vehicle that could be procured—and when one was not available they hesitated not to walk—that they might feast their eyes on the celebrity from town.

The good looks of Julie Durrier always drew after her a crowd when she walked through the streets of Marseilles—a fact that the proprietor of an eating house was not slow to avail himself of when he engaged the girl to serve in his establishment. For a few days all went well, and Boniface was beginning to rejoice over his fortune when he suddenly realized that one can have more than enough of a good thing when the crowd, of which the dimensions grew larger every day, swarmed into his establishment in their eagerness to view the beautiful Hebe and on his attempting to eject some of the most persistent, broke into open violence, destroying the tables and chairs, breaking the glasses and, in short, wrecking the restaurant, whence the cause of the uproar was lucky in escaping by a back exit. The next day the place was closed, and soon afterward Mlle. Durrier left the town.

More extraordinary still was the sensation created at Toulouse toward the close of the sixteenth century by a paragon of beauty known only to fame as La Belle Paule. Whenever she appeared in public she was at once surrounded by a crowd of men and women belonging to all classes, whose admiration grew to be a positive danger to its object, who ran more than a chance of being crushed to death in the press, as, indeed, was more than one of her worshippers. In these circumstances appeal was made to the civic authorities, who, after due consideration, agreed to supply her with protection against her too ardent admirers on condition that she should at certain hours walk abroad so that the public might look upon her face. This, after some demur, she agreed to do, so twice a week the populace of Toulouse were permitted to collect in orderly throngs to view her, whom they regarded as little less than a goddess.—London Tit Bits.

Red Tape.

Red tape is the bulwark of inferior minds. Language is said to conceal thought; red tape paralyzes action. Politicians use red tape to create offices. Without it government would be so simple that everybody would understand it. If you would accomplish big results, look not upon the tape when it is red.—Life.

NATIVE INNS IN JAPAN.

Where You Shed Your Shoes Before Going to Your Room.

The entrance to native inns in Japan is most always a roofed vestibule with a well trodden earthen floor backed by a raised platform about twenty inches high, forming at once a seat and the outer extension of the first floor.

A scattered line of shoes, sandals and geta belonging to the guests usually lie along it, and at one side is a cupboard where umbrellas and footgear are deposited. A big drop octagon clock on the wall, a low desk, a hibachi and a pile of cushions generally complete the office equipment.

The traveler's jinrikai customarily deposits him in the vestibule, at the edge of the platform, beneath the overhang of the roof. Shouts of "O Kyaku san" (honorable visitor) apprise the master and the maids that a guest is arriving and all hurry forward to receive him, uttering cries of welcome and bowing glossy black heads to the floor.

As the traveler sits on the platform a servant removes his shoes and others divest him of his wraps. Shoes are seldom cleaned, and if they be wet or muddy they are left untouched. Habitual frequenters of inns often provide themselves with foot coverings to slip over shoes and thus be able to wear them to the apartment. Without them one must don the heeless slippers furnished or go to one's room unshod.—Kansas City Times.

TWO HUSBANDS.

A Humorous View of the English and American Business Brains.

In the American Magazine James Montgomery Flagg writes humorously about husbands. Following is an extract from what he has to say about the American business husband:

"This animal is very popular and justly so. He comes in a variety of colors, white, tan, deep red, mottled, brown, and sometimes green. The white variety is generally desired. There is no animal known that will take the amount of abuse and neglect that this one does, and still be devoted and affectionate. Hence his popularity. They are limited in intelligence, their one thought being the collecting of money. They will thrive on almost anything—scraps at the table, a few hot words or anything lying around the room that comes handy."

Of the English husband he says: "The march of the centuries has made no change in this sturdy animal. Their love of hunting and killing is perhaps their most endearing quality. They will never distress you by coming home bleeding or mangled as they do not attack animals of their own size. They will eat anything except real food properly cooked. This is technically known as patriotism. Fanatics in England claim preposterous human qualities for them, but this may be laid down to native enthusiasm."

"Applications of arnica are excellent for bruises."

A Cup of Coffee.

As a matter of fact, the secret of good after dinner coffee is merely strength—say a tablespoonful to each cup. The true test of coffee making is not after dinner coffee, but the matutinal pot. The French, as a rule, make execrable cafe au lait, not to mention their perverted taste for the bitterness imparted by chicory. The best coffee I've found (and I make it every morning myself) is in Germany, Austria, the United States and the South American republics. The secret of it lies neither in boiling nor percolation (which is the better method never can be settled), but in using lots of coffee. The average English cook expects a tablespoonful of ground coffee to produce as much liquid as the same quantity of tea.—Brazilian in London Opinion.

"Full Many a Flower."

Aunt Lindy had brought around her three grandchildren for her mistress to see. The three little darlings, in calico smocks, stood squirming in line while Lindy proudly surveyed them.

"What are their names, Lindy?" her mistress asked. "Deys name" after flowers, ma'am. Ah name" em. De bigges' one's name" Gladiola. De nex' one, she name" Heliotrope."

"Those are very pretty," her mistress said. "What is the littles' one named?" "She name" Arthuficial, ma'am."—New York Post.

And to Spare.

"Mrs. Alden has five children. If there were seven more, how many children would Mrs. Alden have?" Several hands were raised. "Anna may tell us," said teacher. "How many children would she have, Anna?"

"Enough."—New York Post.

Another Surprise.

Cholly—And was my present a surprise to your sister? Willie—You bet! Sis said she never thought you'd send her anything so cheap.—Boston Transcript.

Didn't Get It.

"So you demanded an apology. Well, and what happened?" "The supply wasn't equal to the demand."—Boston Transcript.

The Last Word.

"I wouldn't mind my wife's having the last word," said Mr. Henpeck. "If she would only hurry up and get to it!"—Lippincott's.

Manners carry the world for a moment, character for all time.

Touch of Human Nature. You probably know 12 men and can judge about how much prejudice there is bound to be in the average jury.—Acheson Globe.

It Pays to Buy at Messinger's Saturdays

Although wholesale meat prices continue exorbitant, we do not experience a decrease in the quantity of meats consumed by our patrons. Perhaps the truth of the matter is that those homekeepers who buy here are so pleased with our high qualities that they would not do without a roast, steak or chop from this market at any price. However, we try to make it as easy as possible for families of moderate means to have meat on the table as often as it may be desirable, especially Saturdays, as the following price bulletin will attest. No marketman who sells meats of equally high grade dare go below these quotations and remain in business.

Get Meats for Sunday at Lay's Live Saturday Sale

Saturday is always an eventful day at this market—not only because the time is popular, but because interesting meat prices are scheduled for the week-end, to which our patrons eagerly look forward. We do not resort to misrepresentation to announce these special offerings; we do not "scream" about "lowest prices" in a blatant fashion, but quietly announce the sale, knowing that our Meats, Bolognas, Frankfurters, etc., will argue their own case. We are not profit-seeking. Prices lower than ours you will find, but you'll also find correspondingly lower, unsatisfactory qualities. Try us Saturday and enjoy your Sunday Meats to the fullest extent.

Only Custom Tailored Clothes can express your personality. Clothes "pulled from the pile" express only personality of the maker—NOT YOURS.

If you want clothes to fit you properly YOU MUST GO TO A TAILOR—one who understands his business. Nor was the furore that their beauty created of brief duration, for nine years later we read in the London Chronicle of Maria Gunning, by that time Countess of Coventry, and Lady Waldegrave, "that two ladies of distinction (who had, it seems, been in company with the mob, as the phrase is, the Sunday before), walked up and down the walks of St. James' park, preceded by soldiers from the guard—a precaution which gave no small offense to the rest of the company, who were frequently obliged to go out of their path to make way for the procession."

Equally potent was the beauty of the Countess de Castiglione, who, at her first appearance at a ball given by Napoleon III. at the Tuileries, created such a sensation on her entrance that the dancers stopped motionless and the strains of the band ceased, guests and musicians all pressing forward in their eagerness to catch a glimpse of the newcomer. Whenever she went afterward her peerless loveliness produced a like effect, people climbing on to chairs and benches to see her pass, while when, in 1862, she visited the London opera the audience stood upon the seats and struggled for every place of vantage from which to gaze upon the lovely Florentine.

Fanny Murray about the middle of the eighteenth century was one of the beauties of the town. Her beauty was beyond question and created such a stir at Tunbridge Wells, whither she went to drink the waters, as to necessitate the formation of a special guard of her admirers, who kept off the crowds that flocked and pressed around her when she walked on the Pantheon and other public resorts. Indeed, such was the fame of her beauty that from miles around the country folk came in wagons, carts or any vehicle that could be procured—and when one was not available they hesitated not to walk—that they might feast their eyes on the celebrity from town.

The good looks of Julie Durrier always drew after her a crowd when she walked through the streets of Marseilles—a fact that the proprietor of an eating house was not slow to avail himself of when he engaged the girl to serve in his establishment. For a few days all went well, and Boniface was beginning to rejoice over his fortune when he suddenly realized that one can have more than enough of a good thing when the crowd, of which the dimensions grew larger every day, swarmed into his establishment in their eagerness to view the beautiful Hebe and, on his attempting to eject some of the most persistent, broke into open tumult, destroying the tables and chairs, breaking the glasses and, in short, wrecking the restaurant, whence the cause of the uproar was lucky in escaping by a back exit. The next day the place was closed and soon afterward Mlle. Durrier left the town.

More extraordinary still was the sensation created at Toulouse toward the close of the sixteenth century by a paragon of beauty known only to fame as La Belle Paule. Whenever she appeared in public she was at once surrounded by a crowd of men and women belonging to all classes, whose admiration grew to be a positive danger to its object, who ran more than a chance of being crushed to death in the press, as, indeed, was more than one of her worshippers. In these circumstances appeal was made to the civic authorities, who, after due consideration, agreed to supply her with protection against her too ardent admirers on condition that she should at certain hours walk abroad so that the public might look upon her face. This, after some demur, she agreed to do, so twice a week the populace of Toulouse were permitted to collect in orderly throngs to view her, whom they regarded as little less than a goddess.—London Tit Bits.

Red Tape.

Red tape is the bulwark of inferior minds. Language is said to conceal thought; red tape paralyzes action. Politicians use red tape to create of fees. Without it government would be so simple that everybody would understand it. If you would accomplish big results, look not upon the tape when it is red—Life.

NATIVE INNS IN JAPAN.

Where You Shed Your Shoes Before Going to Your Room.

The entrance to native inns in Japan is most always a roofed vestibule with a well trodden earthen floor backed by a raised platform about twenty inches high, forming at once a seat and the outer extension of the first floor.

A scattered line of shoes, sandals and geta belonging to the guests usually lie along it, and at one side is a cupboard where umbrellas and footgear are deposited. A big drop octagon clock on the wall, a low desk, a hibachi and a pile of cushions generally complete the office equipment.

The traveler's jinrik customarily deposits him in the vestibule, at the edge of the platform, beneath the overhang of the roof. Shouts of "O Kyaku san" (honorable visitor) apprise the master and the maids that a guest is arriving and all hurry forward to receive him, uttering cries of welcome and bowing glossy black heads to the floor.

As the traveler sits on the platform a servant removes his shoes and others divest him of his wraps. Shoes are seldom cleaned, and if they be wet or muddy they are left untouched. Habitual frequenters of inns often provide themselves with foot coverings to slip over shoes and thus be able to wear them to the apartment. Without them one must don the heaviest slippers furnished or go to one's room unshod.—Kansas City Times.

TWO HUSBANDS.

A Humorous View of the English and American Business Brands.

In the American Magazine James Montgomery Flagg writes humorously about husbands. Following is an extract from what he has to say about the American business husband:

"This animal is very popular and justly so. He comes in a variety of colors, white, tan, deep red, mottled, brown, and sometimes green. The white variety is generally desired. There is no animal known that will take the amount of abuse and neglect that this one does, and still be devoted and affectionate. Hence his popularity. They are limited in intelligence, their one thought being the collecting of money. They will thrive on almost anything—scraps at the table, a few hot words or anything lying around the room that comes handy."

Of the English husband he says: "The march of the centuries has made no change in this sturdy animal. Their love of hunting and killing is perhaps their most endearing quality. They will never distress you by coming home bleeding or mangled as they do not attack animals of their own size. They will eat anything except real food properly cooked. This is technically known as patriotism. Fanatics in England claim preposterous human qualities for them, but this may be laid down to native enthusiasm."

"Applications of arnica are excellent for bruises."

A Cup of Coffee.

As a matter of fact, the secret of good after dinner coffee is merely strength—say a tablespoonful to each cup. The true test of coffee making is not after dinner coffee, but the matutinal pot. The French, as a rule, make execrable cafe au lait, not to mention their perverted taste for the bitterness imparted by chicory. The best coffee I've found (and I make it every morning myself) is in Germany, Austria, the United States and the South American republics. The secret of it lies neither in boiling nor percolation (which is the better method never can be settled), but in using lots of coffee. The average English cook expects a tablespoonful of ground coffee to produce as much liquid as the same quantity of tea.—Brazilian in London Opinion.

"Full Many a Flower."

Aunt Lindy had brought around her three grandchildren for her mistress to see. The three little darlings, in callow smocks, stood squirming in line while Lindy proudly surveyed them.

"What are their names, Lindy?" her mistress asked.

"Dey's name' after flowers, ma'am. Ah name' 'em. De biggest' one's name' Gladiola. De nex' one, she name' Heliotrope."

"Those are very pretty," her mistress said. "What is the littlest one named?"

"She name' Arthurdical, ma'am."—New York Post.

And to Spare.

"Mrs. Alden has five children. If there were seven more, how many children would Mrs. Alden have?" Several hands were raised.

"Anna may tell us," said teacher. "How many children would she have, Anna?"

"Enough."—New York Post.

Another Surprise.

Cholly—And was my present a surprise to your sister? Willie—You bet! Sis said she never thought you'd send her anything so cheap.—Boston Transcript.

Didn't Get It.

"So you demanded an apology. Well, and what happened?"

"The supply wasn't equal to the demand."—Boston Transcript.

The Last Word.

"I wouldn't mind my wife's having the last word," said Mr. Honpeck. "If she would only hurry up and get to it!"—Lippincott's.

Manners carry the world for a moment, character for all time.

Touch of Human Nature.

You probably know 12 men and can judge about how much prejudice there is bound to be in the average jury.—Aitchison Globe.

It Pays to Buy at Messenger's Saturdays

Although wholesale meat prices continue exorbitant, we do not experience a decrease in the quantity of meats consumed by our patrons. Perhaps the truth of the matter is that those homekeepers who buy here are so pleased with our high qualities that they would not do without a roast, steak or chop from this market at any price.

However, we try to make it as easy as possible for families of moderate means to have meat on the table as often as it may be desirable, especially Saturdays, as the following price bulletin will attest. No marketman who sells meats of equally high grade dare go below these quotations and remain in business.

Get Meats for Sunday at Lay's Live Saturday Sale

Saturday is always an eventful day at this market—not only because the time is popular, but because interesting meat prices are scheduled for the week-end, to which our patrons eagerly look forward. We do not resort to misrepresentation to announce these special offerings; we do not "scream" about "lowest prices" in a blatant fashion, but quietly announce the sale, knowing that our Meats, Bolognas, Frankfurters, etc., will argue their own case. We are not profit-seekers. Prices lower than ours you will find, but you'll also find correspondingly lower, unsatisfactory quality. Try us Saturday and enjoy your Sunday Meats to the fullest extent.

Only Custom Tailored Clothes can express your personality. Clothes "pulled from the pile" express only personality of the maker—NOT YOURS.

If you want clothes to fit you properly YOU MUST GO TO A TAILOR—one who understands his business. You might as well buy a ready-made suit as to have some inexperienced retailer "take your measure" and send to an out-of-town factory at which the garments are "thrown together." In a very short time they lose their shape.

My clothes are measured, cut, draped and shaped to fit YOUR FIGURE, and I give you choice of over 500 durable, stylish, seasonable fabrics. Come in and see.

Each year at this time the word goes forth that our previous efforts in our Wall Paper Department have been outdone, and surprising as it may seem, each year's efforts can in very truth be better than last.

There are designs appropriate for every room in the house, parlor, library, bedroom, kitchen, den or hall. We also carry a line of Wall Bur-lap, Sanitas and Mouldings to match all papers. ### EQUESTRIENNE GARB.

Chic and Convenient
New Riding Outfit.

RIDING HABIT.

Spring is abroad in the land and the horsewoman with it. Garments for horseback riding follow accepted lines. There are the usual riding breeches, worn with a long coat, like the one shown in the picture. Much latitude is permitted in the choice of a hat, many fair equestriennes liking a rough and ready effect, like the one illustrated here.

FANCY BUCKLES.

Costly Jeweled Effects Are Popular For Evening Slippers.

Evening slippers are all of the most elaborate type, and one might well ask. Were they ever before so beautiful? Jeweled buckles and even cameos ornament the toes of satin evening shoes, which harmonize so beautifully with the costume that they are really a part of it.

Women who are interested in dressy styles will find attractive designs in the shops. Sandals with jeweled straps and heavy oriental instep ornaments will appeal to those who make much of their boudoir gowns.

Women who go in for extremes will wear them without stockings, but the more conservative wear gauze silk hose in either flesh color or in a color that harmonizes with the boudoir gown.

LINGERIE BLOUSE.

Pleasing Combination of Cotton Net and Lace For Morning Wear.

More and more are blouses and frocks made up after the simplest and least "cut up" design possible. Here are combined two new notes in fashions, the kimono blouse and the raglan shoulder, in sheer cotton crape with a cotton velvet stripe. Cotton net is another of the requisites of the mode that is used for its transparent effect on cotton blouses of the season. In this case the long sleeves that in Paris are proper on day blouses are of net. The high back, low front collar is of Venice lace.

NEW NET BLOUSE.

Bathing or Gymnastic Slippers.
For gymnastic or bathing slippers cut the legs off old stockings just below the knees. Use the feet and see that they are darned if necessary. Hem all around the top and work long slits all around just below the hem; about an inch will be enough. Place a pair of cork soles, felt lined, in the bottoms of the feet, sewing them in strongly. Run a wide tape or ribbon in the slits at the top and there will be a pair of serviceable, rather high slippers or boots for bathing or gymnastics.

Soapsuds For the Garden.
Never throw soapsuds down the sink if you have a garden. They are valuable poured over the flower or vegetable beds. Soap is a splendid fertilizer.

Dealing With an Affront.
The dull world has got the wrong phrase; it is he who resents an affront who pockets it; he who takes no notice lets it lie in the dirt.—George Macdonald.

Wear 'Kingston-Made' Garments

WHERE WOMEN ARE ASSURED OF A "SQUARE DEAL"

It has never seemed to us consistent with the dignity of good store-keeping nor properly respectful to the public to advertise with a great flare of trumpets something that is apparently a great value and then have the goods themselves in no sense what the public has been fairly led to expect. We refer particularly to one of our competitors who periodically perpetrates a "joke" about "lucky purchases" "made by his buyer in New York" at stated intervals.

This battle-scarred veteran of a falsehood should be pensioned off and allowed to make its exit from the business arena of Kingston, after having been given a bath and a clean shave. We refuse to believe that the women of Kingston and contiguous territory swallow this fellow's "dope" without a grain of salt. Not all women are so easily deluded. Many whose keen perception has penetrated the methods of the store referred to come to us daily with their tales of disappointment. It's up to us, then, to fit them out with fine garments at honest prices.

We believe that an advertisement is in fact a communication addressed to the public, and that it should be as carefully written and with just as much consideration and obligation to the truth as a reputable business concern would allow to appear in a personal letter bearing their signed signature. We aim to have everything a little better than the advertisement says it is.

In the face of alleged "lucky purchases" and other unbridled buncombe, we state frankly and truthfully that

WALL PAPER!

Each year at this time the word goes forth that our previous efforts in our Wall Paper Department have been outdone, and surprising as it may seem, each year's efforts can in very truth be better than last.

OUR CUT-OUT DECORATIONS

are accepted as the standard. We need not talk of their merits. Our 1914 collection is a novelty line, new ideas. We have in stock now the most complete assortment ever shown in this city. There are designs appropriate for every room in the house, parlor, library, bedroom, kitchen, den or hall. We also carry a line of Wall Bur-lap, Sanitas and Mouldings to match all papers. Our entire third floor devoted to this showing. More than 2,000 patterns to choose from.

EQUESTRIENNE GARB.

Chic and Convenient
New Riding Outfit.

RIDING HABIT.

Spring is abroad in the land and the horsewoman with it. Garments for horseback riding follow accepted lines. There are the usual riding breeches, worn with a long coat, like the one shown in the picture. Much latitude is permitted in the choice of a hat, many fair equestriennes liking a rough and ready effect, like the one illustrated here.

FANCY BUCKLES.

Costly Jeweled Effects Are Popular For Evening Slippers.

Evening slippers are all of the most elaborate type, and one might well ask, Were they ever before so beautiful? Jeweled buckles and even cameos ornament the toes of satin evening shoes, which harmonize so beautifully with the costume that they are really a part of it.

Women who are interested in dressy styles will find attractive designs in the shops. Sandals with jeweled straps and heavy oriental instep ornaments will appeal to those who make much of their boudoir goings.

Women who go in for extremes will wear them without stockings, but the more conservative wear gauze silk hose in either flesh color or in a color that harmonizes with the boudoir gown.

LINGERIE BLOUSE.

Pleasing Combination of Cotton Net and Lace For Morning Wear. More and more are blouses and frocks made up after the simplest and least "cut up" design possible. Here are combined two new notes in fashions, the kimono blouse and the raglan shoulder. In sheer cotton crape with a cotton velvet stripe. Cotton net is another of the requisites of the mode that is used for its transparent effect on cotton blouses of the season. In this case the long sleeves that in Paris are proper on day blouses are of net. The high back, low front collar is of Venice lace.

Bathing or Gymnastic Slippers. For gymnastic or bathing slippers cut the legs off old stockings just below the knees. Use the feet and see that they are darned if necessary. Hem all around the top and work long slits all around just below the hem; about an inch will be enough. Place a pair of cork soles, felt lined, in the bottoms of the feet, sewing them in strongly. Run a wide tape or ribbon in the slits at the top and there will be a pair of serviceable, rather high slippers or boots for bathing or gymnastics.

Soapsuds For the Garden. Never throw soapsuds down the sink if you have a garden. They are valuable poured over the flower or vegetable beds. Soap is a splendid fertilizer.

Dealing With an Affront. The dull world has got the wrong phrase; it is he who resents an affront who pockets it; he who takes no notice lets it lie in the dirt—George Macdonald.

Wear 'Kingston-Made' Garments

WHERE WOMEN ARE ASSURED OF A "SQUARE DEAL"

It has never seemed to us consistent with the dignity of good store-keeping nor properly respectful to the public to advertise with a great flare of trumpets something that is apparently a great value and then have the goods themselves in no sense what the public has been fairly led to expect. We refer particularly to one of our competitors who periodically perpetrates a "joke" about "lucky purchases" "made by his buyer in New York" at stated intervals.

This battle-scarred veteran of a falsehood should be pensioned off and allowed to make its exit from the business arena of Kingston, after having been given a bath and a clean shave. We refuse to believe that the women of Kingston and contiguous territory swallow this fellow's "dope" without a grain of salt. Not all women are so easily deluded. Many whose keen perception has penetrated the methods of the store referred to come to us daily with their tales of disappointment. It's up to us, then, to fit them out with fine garments at honest prices.

We believe that an advertisement is in fact a communication addressed to the public, and that it should be as carefully written and with just as much consideration and obligation to the truth as a reputable business concern would allow to appear in a personal letter bearing their signed signature. We aim to have everything a little better than the advertisement says it is.

In the face of alleged "lucky purchases" and other unbridled buncombe, we state frankly and truthfully that

Men Cannot Afford to Be Poorly Dressed

Good appearance is a strong factor in business success. Good clothes are essential to good appearance. But good clothing need not mean extravagance. The making of attire for men is now standardized almost to an exact science.

Prices are often quite moderate and seldom unduly high. Glance through the advertising in The Freeman from day to day and notice the character of the clothing the stores are offering.

Not much trouble to dress well if men are alert to their opportunities. The advertising in this newspaper is the guide-post to Opportunity Street.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, April 24.—Weakness again dominated the stock market at the opening today and prices were carried to lower levels on the initial transactions. The New York opening followed the London lead, Americans being under strong pressure on the London exchange. The selling was induced by the growing seriousness of the Mexican situation. After fifteen minutes a rallying tendency set in and some issues made recoveries but this lasted for only a brief period. Canadian Pacific fell 2½ and Union Pacific, after opening half lower rallied. Mexican Petroleum was sold by those fearing destruction of the company's property in Mexico. It fell sharply to 57½ for the loss of 2½. Guggenheim Exploration lost 1½ and American Smelting sold down 1½. Lehigh Valley, after opening ½ down, recovered. American Can was one of the few stocks making a gain. It rose one point to 26. Amalgamated Copper which sold minus its dividend of 1½ opened at 70½ against its close of 73 last night. This represented a loss of ½. Among the other opening declines were the following: United States Steel common, ½; New York Central, ½; Reading, ½; American Tobacco, 1 and Southern American, ½. The curb was heavy. Americans in London were weak on professional dealings. Canadian Pacific in London sold down to the lowest point it was touched since it began paying ten per cent.

Prices held up well in the final hour some issues making gains, over their noon level. Mexican Petroleum which had sold down to 55, rallied and advanced to 56½. Erie sold around 26½ for a net fractional gain on the day. Weakness continued in Canadian Pacific, this stock going to 190¼ for the loss of 1¼ from the morning opening. Steel held around 57. The tone was steady.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged; other bonds irregular.

Quotations furnished by John D. Kling, Broadway and Strand, Kingston, N. Y., Tel. 92. Correspondent of C. H. Van Buren & Company, members of Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York.

MAGEE'S BATTING EYE DOES NOT FAIL HIM.

Sherwood Magee, the hard hitting left fielder of the Philadelphia National League team, who has started the season of 1914 at a terrific batting clip. This demon slugger is the terror of all pitchers, not only because he is a consistent safe hitter but because he usually makes his longest hits in a pinch.

Flying Fish.

Interesting are the habits of the flying fish, that queer denizen of the sea found principally in the region of the trade winds. "Does it rise from the sea like a bird?" you ask. No. It shoots out of the waves like an arrow and with outspreading wings sails on the wind in graceful curves, rising sometimes, one might say, to the height of fifteen feet, but not often so high, and then, lowering, it again touches the crest of a wave and renews its flight. This operation may be repeated till it covers a distance, say, of 500 yards in the case of the stoutest on the wing, though very often not half that distance is covered. A ship sailing through the trade winds will often be visited on dark nights by flying fish, which hit the sails or rigging and fall on deck, where, of course, they soon give up life. St. Nicholas.

The Inconsolable Widower.

"There is only one inconsolable widower and that is the ostrich," said the zoo keeper. "The ostrich, if his mate dies, never remarries."

"He is also the most faithful of husbands, a sequence not always inevitable. He waits on his wife like a cavalier. He digs the nest for her. Of the forty days' setting he does the hardest share; he does the night work, covering the eggs from sunset till late the next morning."

"Sometimes, naturally, domestic complications occur, and the ostrich kicks. He kicks, in fact, his wife to death. "But what a consolation it must be to her as she passes away to think that he will remain true and constant to her memory and never, never seek another mate."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Easiest Way.

Two little fellows were exchanging confidences one afternoon on the front steps. "Go," said one, "I hate to have bedtime come. My mother wants me to take a bath every night."

"So does mine," remarked the other little boy, "but I don't mind it. My father is a doctor, and he always gets him to chloroform me, so I never know a thing about it until it's all over."—Detroit Free Press.

Without Pins and Buttons

We want every mother to see the Vanta Baby Garments and have the experienced nurse, who will be with us next week, explain just the importance of doing away with pins and buttons. Take the Vanta Baby Vest.

This fastening is made a part of the garment itself—cannot come off—never needs re-sewing. The tape—unlike the kinds you know—never gets hard or stringy—never curls or kinks up in the wash. It has simply revolutionized baby dressing.

Vanta Baby Garments

Every Vanta Vest is made double breasted—fits snugly around the throat and has this new kind of fastening instead of dangerous pins and buttons. We have them in sizes for babies of all ages—finely knit—daintily finished in several varieties of material. And every one has a little fastening below the curve of the abdomen that keeps the vest from working up around the waist. See these garments for your baby's sake.

A pinless diaper pattern FREE to every mother.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, April 24.—Weakness again dominated the stock market at the opening today and prices were carried to lower levels on the initial transactions. The New York opening followed the London lead, Americans being under strong pressure on the London exchange. The selling was induced by the growing seriousness of the Mexican situation. After fifteen minutes a rallying tendency set in and some issues made recoveries but this lasted for only a brief period. Canadian Pacific fell 2½ and Union Pacific, after opening half lower rallied. Mexican Petroleum was sold by those fearing destruction of the company's properties in Mexico. It fell sharply to 57½ for the loss of 2½. Guggenheim Exploration lost 1½ and American Smelting sold down 1½. Lehigh Valley, after opening ½ down, recovered. American Can was one of the few stocks making a gain. It rose one point to 26. Amalgamated Copper which sold minus ½, divided of 1½ opened at 70½, against its close of 73 last night. This represented a loss of 3½. Among the other opening declines were the following: United States Steel common, ½; New York Central ½; Reading, ¼; American Tobacco, 1 and Southern Pacific, ¾. The curb was heavy. Americans in London were weak on professional dealings. Canadian Pacific in London sold down to the lowest point it was touched since it began paying ten per cent.

Prices held up well in the final hour some issues making gains over their noon level. Mexican Petroleum which had sold down to 55½, rallied and advanced to 56½. Erie sold around 26½ for a net fractional gain on the day. Weakness continued in Canadian Pacific, this stock going to 190½ for the loss of 1½ from the morning opening. Steel held around 57. The tone was steady.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged; other bonds irregular.

Quotations furnished by John D. Kling, Broadway and Strand, Kingston, N. Y., Tel. 93, Correspondent of C. H. Van Buren & Company, members of Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York.

MAGEE'S BATTING EYE DOES NOT FAIL HIM.

Sherwood Magee, the hard hitting left fielder of the Philadelphia National League team, who has started the season of 1914 at a terrific batting clip. This demon slugger is the terror of all pitchers, not only because he is a consistent safe hitter but because he usually makes his longest hits in a pinch.

Interesting are the habits of the flying fish, that queer denizen of the sea found principally in the region of the trade winds. "Does it rise from the sea like a bird?" you ask. No. It shoots out of the waves like an arrow and with outspreading wings sails on the wind in graceful curves, rising sometimes, one might say, to the height of fifteen feet, but not often so high, and then, lowering, it again touches the crest of a wave and renews its flight. This operation may be repeated till it covers a distance, say, of 500 yards in the case of the stoutest on the wing, though very often not half that distance is covered. A ship sailing through the trade winds will often be visited on dark nights by flying fish, which hit the sails or rigging and fall on deck, where, of course, they soon give up life. St. Nicholas.

The Inconceivable Widower. "There is only one inconceivable widower and that is the ostrich," said the zoo keeper. "The ostrich, if his mate dies, never remarries."

"He is also the most faithful of husbands, a sequence not always inevitable. He waits on his wife like a cherub. He digs the nest for her. Of the forty days' setting he does the hardest share; he does the night work, covering the eggs from sunset till late the next morning."

"Sometimes, naturally, domestic complications occur, and the ostrich kicks. He kicks, in fact, his wife to death. But what a consolation it must be to her as she passes away to think that he will remain true and constant to her memory and I never, never seek another mate."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Easiest Way. Two little fellows were exchanging confidences one afternoon on the front steps.

"Go," said one, "I hate to have bedtime come. My mother wants me to take a bath every night."

"So does mine," remarked the other little boy, "but I don't mind it. My father is a doctor, and no always gets him to chloroform me, so I never know a thing about it until it's all over."—Detroit Free Press.

In Their Several Classes. A timid person is frightened before a danger, a coward during the time and a courageous person afterwards.—Richter.

THE NEW CAPTAIN

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

In the many company and regimental changes which occurred after McClellan's peninsular campaign Company H of the Tenth volunteers got a new captain by transfer. He was a fair haired, blue eyed man, who lacked ruggedness and sternness. The rough and rugged men looked the new captain over and said to each other:

"Bahl! He's no fighter. They've sent us a man who hasn't the heart to kill a sheep!"

Later on, when Company H had been out on the picket lines and had a sharp skirmish with the enemy, there was strange talk among the men.

"Do you know," whispered the orderly sergeant to the first corporal, "that they gave us a cussed coward for a captain?"

"Hush, hush!" replied the corporal. "I won't hush. I was watching him in that little scrimmage, and he was as white as a sheet and trembling like a leaf."

Next day the captain sent for the orderly sergeant, and the latter had a strong suspicion, but he was greeted quietly and pleasantly, and the captain asked a few questions before saying:

"So, sergeant, you think I'm a coward and should be forced to resign?"

Sergeant Clay was a bluff, blunt man. The captain had asked him a direct question, and, throwing military etiquette to the dogs, he answered:

"You didn't make no record to be proud of out there the other day!"

"I was very nervous," slowly admitted the captain after a long pause. "It was my first time under fire. I wasn't afraid of being killed, that I can remember, but the excitement upset me. Suppose you and the boys wait a bit before you send me a request to resign. I don't know myself yet, and you can't fairly call me a failure until we have another turn at it. If my nerves fail me in the next crisis you won't have to demand my resignation. Are you willing to wait?"

"Captain," the sergeant whispered as a feeling of awe came to him, "it ain't for you to ask this or that of us. It's for me to say that there'll be no more talk among the boys and that in our next fight you'll make a record to be proud of."

It had been man to man instead of captain to sergeant, and it was still so when their hands were extended and clasped.

"Well?" queried half a dozen sergeants and corporals as the orderly returned to his quarters.

"Well, you hear me now!" replied the man as he looked from one to the other. "We've done a lot of talking with our mouths. From this time on till we've seen our captain prance about in another scrimmage we are going to shut right up. The chap as does any blowing won't be no friend of mine."

A week later began the campaign which ended in the battle of Antietam. "Fighting Joe" Hooker was leading the division to which the Third brigade and the Tenth volunteers belonged, and as Company H pressed forward the second sergeant muttered to the orderly:

"How's-how's things goin' to be at the head of the company?"

"Now, don't you worry the shirt off your back before it's time, Joe Hope! I'm going to wait and see, and the rest of you have got to do the same. Durn a man who won't give another man a fair show!"

As the Tenth regiment got the word the captain of Company H passed swiftly before his line. In the ghostly light he seemed taller by a foot. The men who peered at him saw that his jaws were firm and set and his eyes blazing.

"He means fight!" whispered the first corporal.

"Say, he'll lead us into hades and back!" muttered the second sergeant.

Forward, guide left, moved the Tenth, and the front line had scarcely brushed the wet off the cornstalks when they met with a volley. It was so close and deadly that there was confusion. The center broke back, the flanks halted, and order and discipline were lost.

"Attention, Company H! By the right flank--march! On the left into line! Forward--double quick--charge bayonets!"

It was the voice of the new captain, and, like clockwork, the men who were tumbling over each other fell into line and plowed their way out of the hurly burly. As they cleared the mob their muskets came down to the charge, and, with shouts and cheers, they drove through a line of battle and sent a thousand men scurrying away through the mists. As they stood panting, with dead and wounded under their feet, the other companies came marching up to join them and to hold the position. Then the sun blazed up over the hills and devoured the mist at a gulp, and every living man in Company H turned to look at his captain. His face was as white as a dead man's, but there was a grim smile of triumph over it, and the exultation of battle was making his blue eyes shine like stars.

"Well, I'll be cussed!" whispered the second sergeant.

"Blast my eyes, if he ain't a fighter!" gasped the first corporal.

The orderly sergeant caught the captain's eye and nodded and brought up his hand in salute. He received a nod and a salute in reply.

"We jest didn't understand how he was made!" muttered the orderly as he removed his cap to inspect a bullet hole. "He's done us all proud today!"

THE NEW CAPTAIN

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

In the many company and regimental changes which occurred after McClellan's peninsular campaign Company H of the Tenth volunteers got a new captain by transfer. He was a fair haired, blue eyed man, who lacked ruggedness and sternness. The rough and rugged men looked the new captain over and said to each other:

"Bah! He's no fighter. They've sent us a man who hasn't the heart to kill a sheep!"

Later on, when Company H had been out on the picket lines and had a sharp skirmish with the enemy, there was strange talk among the men.

"Do you know," whispered the orderly sergeant to the first corporal, "that they gave us a cussed coward for a captain?"

"Hush, hush!" replied the corporal. "I won't hush. I was watching him in that little scrimmage, and he was as white as a sheet and trembling like a leaf."

Next day the captain sent for the orderly sergeant, and the latter had a strong suspicion, but he was greeted quietly and pleasantly, and the captain asked a few questions before saying:

"So, sergeant, you think I'm a coward and should be forced to resign?"

Sergeant Clay was a bluff, blunt man. The captain had asked him a direct question, and, throwing military etiquette to the dogs, he answered:

"You didn't make no record to be proud of out there the other day!"

"I was very nervous," slowly admitted the captain after a long pause. "It was my first time under fire. I wasn't afraid of being killed, that I can remember, but the excitement upset me. ## KINGSTON HAS WAR OF ITS OWN

While the Mexican situation is the most important event gripping our attention at the present time we might relax for a single instant and glance at the local war. Yes! Kingston has, on a small scale, what might aptly be termed a gasoline war. The first gun in the local crisis was fired a week ago when the Macmol Company leased a small strip of land from Charles Gray, on the corner of Maiden Lane and Broadway and erected a small office building and sunk a huge tank in the ground to be used for holding gasoline. John A. Molloy was engaged as the local agent to represent the company, which is independent of the Standard Oil Company, and gasoline was offered for sale at 18 cents a gallon.

The policy of "watchful waiting" was not believed in by some of the local garages who handle gasoline made by the Standard Oil Company and which they have been selling at 20 cents a gallon and when they learned that the Macmol Company had opened up a station and was selling gasoline at 2 cents a gallon cheaper they got busy and secured gasoline which they are now selling at 15 cents a gallon, or 3 cents a gallon cheaper than the Macmol concern.

The claim is made by those handling the Standard Oil gasoline that it furnishes the most reliable fuel for motor cars and the price is still maintained at 20 cents a gallon.

This cheaper gasoline we are now selling is not made by the Standard Oil Company but we want our customers to know we can sell them gasoline as cheap as any one," explained one of the large garage owners this morning. He continued: "We want it understood, however, that we do not guarantee this cheap gasoline and it is not to be compared with the Standard Oil gasoline for which we are still asking and receiving 20 cents a gallon."

The Macmol people claim that the gasoline they are selling for 18 cents a gallon is as good as any on the market. Automobileists who have used various makes of gasoline are of course in a position to judge for themselves which gasoline is the cheapest in the end to use and which is the best for their automobile.

NAVIGATION NOTES.

News of Traffic on Hudson River and Rondout Creek.

With the lowering of the water at Albany the tugs of the Cornell line are at work getting boats out of Athens, Coxsackie and Castleton, where they have been tied up as they could not get into the Erie canal. There are 69 tied up at Athens and many others at other points. It was thought that the Newburgh-Albany line boat would get through to Albany this afternoon.

The steamer Iroquois is still hard aground at Alsen despite the work of the steam derrick which was brought up the river on Wednesday night to attempt to pull her off.

The tug Levy went down the river this morning with the tow for New York. The John H. Cordis is bound up the river from New York.

A number of tugs of the Cornell line were taken from the Cornell dock to the machine shop docks this morning to be placed in readiness for the towing season.

The steamer A. J. Phillips, which runs between New Baltimore and Albany, was in the creek this afternoon coaling up at Hillebrand's dock.

Follette's Brief Filed.

The defendant's brief in the Follette case has been served by Follette's counsel on District Attorney Cunningham, in accordance with the order granted by Judge Cochrane at Hudson last Saturday, and the certificate of reasonable doubt granted to Follette, under which he was admitted to bail, will not be cancelled. Whether the case will be argued at the May term of the appellate division will depend upon whether it can be put on the calendar for that term of court. If it can be put on the appellate division calendar, there is a probability of the argument taking place at the May term.

Street Oiling Begins.

The work of oiling the city streets for the season was started this morning when a force of men under Street Superintendent Van Keuren started to oil Albany avenue.

MANY BUSINESS CHANGES UPTOWN

The first of May will see a number of important business changes in the uptown business section of the city. Arthur G. Carr, who recently purchased the Judge Parker residence on Pearl street, is having the interior remodeled and expects to shortly remove his undertaking parlors at 292 Fair street to the new location.

Harry R. LeFever, the optician, who for a number of years has been located at 32 John street, will remove to the building now occupied by A. Carr & Son as soon as the interior of the building has been remodeled to suit his needs.

George L. Kinkade is removing his grocery business from 46 North Front street to the building across the street, 39 North Front street, which has been remodeled and handsomely equipped with new fixtures.

Frank S. Thompson will shortly remove his stove store at 43 North Front street to 55 North Front street.

The store next door, 53 North Front street, will be occupied by U. S. Grant, now located at 316 Wall street.

As soon as Mr. Grant has moved to his new location on North Front street the building on Wall street will be entirely remodeled and a new front put in and will be occupied by a man named Forman, who will sell ladies' clothing.

To Consider New Charter.

The Municipal League will hold a special meeting on Saturday evening at the Kingston city library and the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce will hold a special meeting the first of the week to take up the suggestion of Mayor Canfield in regard to the league and the board of directors each appointing three men and the mayor appointing three men to form a committee of nine to consider either the revision of the present city charter or the adoption of one of the new simplified forms as outlined in the optional bill. The officers of both bodies are heartily in favor of the plan.

NEW CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Ground was broken this morning on Fair street, near St. James street, for the erection of a church for the congregation of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, on Sterling street. George Anderson is the contractor and builder in charge of the work. The plans call for the erection of a very attractive one story edifice. The auditorium will seat one hundred and fifty people.

HUERTA STILL HAS CHANCE TO YIELD

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Washington, April 24.—General Huerta has been given seventy-two hours at the outside in which to signify his intention to yield to the American demands.

"If the Mexican dictator does not comply with President Wilson's expressed wishes within two or three days," it was learned at the White House today, "he will feel the full weight of the mailed fist of the United States which up to this time has merely prepared to strike."

The temporary return to the "watchful waiting" policy it developed today, is for two reasons—first, to give Americans time to get out of the interior of Mexico; second, to allow the United States forces time to gather at Vera Cruz and along the border.

By Monday morning five thousand American soldiers will be off for Vera Cruz. By Monday morning the entire torpedo fleet will be ready for blockading duty off the Mexican coast. By Monday morning a competent invading force will be prepared to hurl itself over the border and to follow the line of march blazed by General Zachary Taylor and his frontiersmen in 1848.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The S. M. Club will give a private Yama dance this evening in Burgevin Hall. Only those with invitations will be admitted.

A moonlight and confetti dance will be given by the Bell-Nord Club in Griffiths's Hall on Friday evening, May 1. Music by McLean's orchestra.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Julia A. Beardsley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion E. Beardsley, and Edwin Herrick. The wedding will take place on Wednesday, April 29.

A Mother Goose fair and entertainment will be given Tuesday and Wednesday, April 28 and 29, in Trinity M. E. Church. On Tuesday a dinner will be served in the lecture room and on Wednesday a supper will be served from 5 to 7 p. m.

The tea daisant which is to be given tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock at St. Joseph's Hall for the benefit of the Sunshine Society work this coming season, is proving to be very popular indeed. The best of music for those who dance, delicious light refreshments for those who look on, and comfort and cheer to many from the proceeds all go to make this affair so appealing to the public.

Thursday evening a very pleasant surprise was tendered Miss Julia Beardsley at her home, 13 Abbey street, when the members of the Delta Alpha Club of Trinity M. E. Church and the members of her Sunday school class of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church, of which she is teacher, gave her a miscellaneous shower. Many handsome and useful gifts were presented. The evening was enjoyably spent with games and music and delicious refreshments were served. The marriage of Miss Beardsley to Edward Herrick of Saugerties will occur in the near future.

Harry Beatty entertained forty of his friends at his home, the Suddam farm, on Hurley avenue on Tuesday evening. A number of the ladies wore gowns with wigs to match. The evening was pleasantly spent in dancing, singing and games. At a late hour a bountiful repast was served the guests. The table decorations were sweet peas and the favors were roses. During the evening solos were rendered by Miss Katherine Harmon and instrumental music by Miss Pauline Kaufman and Mr. Zeh. The party broke up in the "wee small" hours all voting Mr. Beatty a fine host.

Lefever-Relyea.

A., were married at the home of the bride, No. 20 Courtney avenue, by the Rev. Charles H. Cookman, pastor of St. James Methodist Episcopal Church, Kingston. The groom was attended by his brother, Lieutenant Harold MacLachlan as best man, both brothers wearing their full military regalia, with swords. A number of regular army officers were in attendance in full dress uniform, and the ceremony took place under a large American flag. Lieutenant MacLachlan is now on furlough, but is liable to be recalled for active service. The honeymoon will be spent at Atlantic City.

Lecture on Feeble-Minded.

This evening A. E. Hamilton, secretary of the second international eugenics congress, will lecture at the Y. M. C. A. hall on the care of the feeble minded. Complete Visible Writing

This is the great distinctive feature of the Model 10

Smith Premier Typewriter

Complete Visible Writing means not only that the writing itself is visible, but that the operating machinery which produces the writing is also visible. Above all, it means that the keyboard is completely visible.

Why? Because it is the only typewriter having a key for every character—hence the character printed by each key is always the same. This distinctive feature has won for the Smith Premier Typewriter a vast army of loyal users.

MEXICANS FIRE

El Paso, Texas, April 24.—Mexican Federal troops at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, began firing across the Rio Grande into Laredo, Texas, this afternoon, according to a dispatch received at Fort Bliss. Earlier in the day the Federals freed all the prisoners in the jail at Nuevo Laredo and ordered the American troops on duty at the bridge when they refused to let the convicts cross into American territory.

SHEET BREAD OF ASIA.

Used For Awnings, Blankets, Window-panes and Food.

Instead of baking bread in loaves, the inhabitants of Asia Minor, Arabia, Kurdistan and the Tigris-Euphrates valley make it into sheets. These sheets are about forty inches wide and twice as long, and the natives make almost as much use of them as the American Indian does of birch bark. If they need an awning for protection against sun or rain they unwind a roll of this bread and carry it back and forth over a pole several times, much as a camper puts up a dog tent, for it has a coat of almond oil or mutton tallow the bread is fairly waterproof.

It is a comical sight to see a teamster or camel driver of the Levant travel placidly through a heavy shower with a couple of yards of bread sheeting thrown over his shoulders and to see him tear off pieces here and there and chew on them if he feels hungry. The bread is made of durum wheat flour mixed with the pulp of sultana raisins, which gives it a sweet taste and a fragrance like that of honey.

The Arab uses his sheets of bread, which look like chamois leather, for a makeshift blanket, and it is said by travelers who have tried it that it keeps the heat in and the cold out almost as well as a real blanket. But some of the Russian engineers at work on the construction of the Transiberian railway did even better, for they made a paste of the bread by boiling several pieces and then stuck together two strips of the sheeting, each a meter wide by two meters long. Thus they manufactured a sleeping bag, and very comfortable one too.

The Turkish peasants use this flat bread for window panes, and in the bazaar the vendors of merchandise wind up pieces as a grocer does a paper cornucopia and use them to hold small amounts of nuts, Turkish candles or squares of sugar. Of course the purchaser eats the bag with its contents. On the same shape the bread sheeting is used for holding the fruity drinks of the Bosphorus, but it will not stand hot liquids, even when it is coated with almond oil. Thanks to the raisin pulp, the bread is of remarkable elasticity and can be bent back and forth without cracking. It has actually been used for bookbinding.—Youth's Companion.

Woman's World

The Latest White House
Bride a Social Favorite.

Photograph of Mr. McAdoo copyright by American Press Association.
SECRETARY McADOO AND THE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER.

The youngest daughter of President Wilson, chosen as a bride by William Gibbs McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, is one of the most attractive and democratic young women who ever graced the White House. Tall above the average, with a slender and willowy figure, she commands attention wherever she appears. Her blue eyes are fringed with heavy lashes and arched by dark brows. Her mouth is expressive, and she has the chin that characterizes all the president's daughters. Her complexion is a fine clear one, and her shapely head is crowned with masses of soft dark hair. Her smile is a singularly attractive one. She has a keen sense of humor.

She plays tennis, rides, drives, swims, rows and is fond of dancing. Like her sisters, she is a good linguist, speaking French and German fluently. From her mother she acquired a taste for art. She spent several years at an art school and paints very well. She has studied music and is a charming singer.

At Cornish, N. H., where the Wilsons spent last summer, she was the most popular member of the colony. Actively interested in the question of the protection of bird life, she lent her influence to making the performance of Percy Mackaye's bird masque "Sanctuary" an artistic and financial success. As Ornithologist, she was much admired.

Fond of society and a diplomat in her dealings with it, there is no question that the bride of Secretary McAdoo will become a notable figure in Washington's official set.

CAMEO SHOE BUCKLES.

Novel Development of the Craze For This Jewelry.

The cameo plaque buckle has not fallen from grace, but merely descended to our shoes. It is such a beautiful thing that one would expect to see it at the throat or at most as a buckle at the waist. But it is really used wherever an artistic ornament will catch the light.

It fastens the new capes and cloaks. It is attached to a sash end. The cameo ornament for a hat may prove on close inspection to be a cameo plaque buckle.

And now in special size and design we have the cameo buckle for shoes and slippers. Here it would reach the limit of its usefulness, one would fancy, but fashion strikes like lightning, and one never can tell.

The cameo plaque buckle is, however, both smart and of unusual beauty, and an instep seems very well designed for its display.

System For Cleanup Time.

Housecleaning ought to be more than the mere scrubbing and polishing of the house. It should be a time to take account of stock and to clear out the unserviceable or unnecessary.

Before the cleaning is really begun it would be a good plan to go all over the house and put aside what is no longer needed, what can be given or thrown away and what needs to be repaired.

If three large boxes are placed in an unused attic and labeled "Charity," "Junk" and "To Be Repaired" every one in the household may contribute to the contents, and all will know just where to put the various things.

Three Kinds of Starch.

In the laundry the woman who knows will provide three kinds of starch—wheat starch for general family use, cornstarch for extras, like collars and cuffs, and rice starch for laces, fine lingerie and lawns. In the proportion of two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch to one of wheat, the cooking done properly, collars, cuffs, shirt bosoms, etc., can be beautifully stiffened at home.

Cure For Yawning.

Do not make furious and painful efforts to keep yourself from yawning. Just press your thumb up into the underneath part of your chin, so that it appears to be pushing at the root of your tongue. You can do this while apparently leaning your head on your hand. No one will notice it, and it does away instantly with the desire to yawn.

Simon Pedrick's
Discovery

Scientific Expedition That Ended In a Wedding

By JAMES CHANDLER

"What is the matter, Simon?" asked Mrs. Pedrick, glancing over her spectacles at her son's gloomily thoughtful countenance.

"Nothing, ma," returned Simon, bearing a deep sigh.

"Nothing? When you look like that? Simon Pedrick, you tell your ma what's troubling you, right off!" she warned as she came around the table and laid a strong hand on his shoulder.

"Well," sighed Simon resignedly, "I don't seem to amount to much, ma. Of course, I know that I've got the best candy store and soda business in West Hollow, but it don't satisfy my—my ambitions."

Mrs. Pedrick shook the fat shoulder impatiently.

"Not satisfied?" she mimicked in an exasperated manner. "Ambitions! Humph! I'd like to know what more you can expect than to be a successful business man? I know what's the matter with you, Simon Pedrick. You're mooning over that silly Luella Finch, who hasn't got eyes for anybody except that new professor at the academy. My poor boy!"—her voice melting—"stop thinking about Luella Finch and all her high educated friends. There's plenty of girls in West Hollow who'd jump at a chance to marry you, Simon, if you'd only perk up and go after 'em."

"YOU SHAN'T STIR A STEP, SIMON," SHE FUMED.

Simon shrugged his shoulders. "I want to do something, be something—like him," he muttered moodily. "Like who? Professor Tooley?"

"Yes," nodded Simon. "What has he ever done?" challenged Mrs. Pedrick.

"He's explored, and dug up old relics, and discovered things; once he went on a voyage to the arctic regions, and the man he was with, the head explorer, he discovered new land up there, and he named it after a king. Ma, I'd like to do something like that! Luella thinks Tooley's covered with glory because he was with the man who discovered the new land, and—"

"And named it after a king?" snorted Mrs. Pedrick. "And you call yourself an American citizen! Simon Pedrick, do you know that your ancestors on both sides fought for this country's freedom—and now you're wishing you could discover an island so's to name it after a king—leastways you're envious of the man who did it."

"Ma, you'd never understand," sighed Simon, rising and reaching for his hat. "Nobody understands me."

With which gloomy reflection Mr. Pedrick went out into the January twilight.

A week later the little village of West Hollow was stirred to its depths by an announcement in the weekly newspaper.

Said the West Hollow Echo:

Our well known neighbor, Mr. Simon Pedrick, starts this morning on a very unique expedition to the polar regions. Mr. Pedrick, who is the proprietor of the popular Eden Confectionery Parlors, tells us that it is his intention to walk to the farthest borders of British North America. This expedition will occupy all of a couple of years, and Mr. Pedrick expects to obtain much interesting material for a book which he will write on his return. The Eden Confectionery Parlors will in the absence of Mr. Pedrick be under the able management of William Hicks, who has had charge of the soda fountain for several years. We extend our hearty good wishes for the success of this expedition and await with interest Mr. Pedrick's forthcoming book.

In another paragraph the Echo announced that its readers would be favored with weekly letters from Simon Pedrick giving an interesting account of his trip to the north country.

If the neighbors of Simon Pedrick were amazed at his action his mother was inflamed to indignation by the startling scheme.

"You shan't stir a step, Simon," she fumed vainly. "I forbid it."

"Ma," said Simon firmly, "I'm forty years old. I've always minded you and been a good son. This is the thing I want to do most of all. I can afford it, and the store will take care of you comfortably. Now, don't say another word, because I've made up my mind, and I'm going."

When Simon Pedrick talked like his lamented father Mrs. Pedrick knew that further opposition was useless, so she buckled on her armor of helpfulness and sent her son away with plenty of warm clothing in his knapsack and her blessing ringing in his ears. Now that Simon had turned his face to the north and the weekly Echo printed paragraphs about his going and her neighbors marveled at this unexpected spirit of adventure that had cropped out in the staid Simon.

By the time Simon's first letter, sent from Upper Dale, twenty miles away, had been printed in the Echo his mother was in a mood to read the account of his trip with bated breath and shining eyes.

Now, on this crisp January morning, Simon Pedrick threw back his broad shoulders and took in deep breaths of the fine air.

Simon knew that he never felt better in his life, for once he was free from restraint and the ever present responsibility of the ice cream parlors.

What Simon Pedrick did not know was that his too abundant flesh was melting from his frame, the life in the out of doors, the plain food and the long restful nights were doing their work and making Simon Pedrick into the man that nature had intended him to become. As the fat disappeared Simon became better looking, his fat gave place to firm, hardened muscles and a healthy color flamed his cheeks.

"Funny, how I almost forgot what I'm going after," mused Simon as he trudged along. "Seems 's if I'm just out for a walk and going right back home any minute—but maybe it'll be two years before I ever see West Hollow again. But when I do, well, maybe I'll have made myself famous enough to be called professor—he, Professor Pedrick—I guess Luella Finch wouldn't snub me then."

Thinking about Luella Finch plunged Simon into deep gloom once more. This was nearing the end of his fourth week of tramping, and he was well over the line into the next state. That his enterprise was ridiculous under the circumstances was a matter that the village bred man did not consider. His desire to make a name to lay at the feet of fair Luella Finch quite outdistanced his common sense.

Now he was approaching a small hamlet perched on the mountain side, and as the sun was declining in the west Simon began to think about supper and a night's lodging.

A farm wagon piled high with cordwood creaked from a side road, and the red mittened driver offered Simon a ride.

"I'm walking for my health," added Simon as he declined the offer with thanks—"that is, I find it healthy to walk, while at the same time I am exploring in the—er—interests of science."

"I see," said the rustic in an awed tone. "Then I reckon, as I can't be no help, I'll drive on. Good day, professor!"

"Professor!" How sweet the word rang in Simon's ear! "Good day!" he called heartily, and then, remembering his need of supper, he ran after the wagon and inquired how far he was from the village hotel.

"About two miles—only there ain't no hotel no more," informed the farmer. "It burned down last fall after the last summer boarder went, and Hi Carson, he don't reckon to build again before next spring."

"Where can I get a night's lodging?" asked Simon.

"Oh, I reckon Miss Lucetta Beals can accommodate you. She takes summer boarders, and now that there ain't no hotel no more she's been taking all the drummers and such like. It's the little white house up yonder on the hill—looks near by, but it's a mile and a half from here. You're welcome, professor!"

There it was again—Professor Pedrick! What would Luella Finch say now?

Simon was in a glow of delight as he tramped over the remaining miles that led to the cozy home of Lucetta Beals. Surrounded by resinous pines dappled with snow and with the sunshine burning against the western windows, the scene resembled a pretty Christmas card as Simon neared the front door.

A little white haired lady was tossing crumbs to a flock of gray birds hopping on the snow, and when she saw Simon and his knapsack she shook the last crumbs from her fingers and came to the top of the steps.

"I don't believe I know who you are," she ventured as Simon removed his hat before her.

"I'm Simon Pedrick of West Hollow, and I'm in search of a night's lodging," explained Simon, and then as a more definite introduction he produced the clipping from the West Hollow Echo describing his expedition and setting forth its purpose.

"Come right inside, Professor Pedrick," gurgled Miss Beals, immediately attaching the coveted title to Simon's name. "If you will put up with my poor fare for a night I shall be delighted to have you stop with me."

As Miss Lucetta Beals' "poor fare" consisted of fried chicken and cream biscuits, with honey and currant jelly, as well as spice cake and wonderfully fragrant tea, Simon settled down to an evening of perfect enjoyment. After the meal had been cleared away by a capable black woman the two repaired to the cozy sitting room, and Simon laid out his maps and outlined his projected journey into the cold north.

And in the midst of the interesting conversation there came the rumble of heavy wheels as a vehicle stopped before the gate. There was a loud "Whoa!" and then as the vehicle departed the sound of light footsteps on the porch and the sharp clang of the doorbell.

"The station stage," explained Miss Lucetta over her shoulder as she hurried out. "Somebody wanting a night's lodging, I expect, Delia," to the woman in the kitchen; "put on the teakettle and get out the chicken again."

Then she darted into the front hall and Simon heard the door open and the sound of a girlish voice lifted in glad greeting. Miss Beals' shriek of surprise was drowned in hurried whispers, and finally there came the closing of another door on the opposite side of the hall.

Simon waited awhile; then he folded up his maps and put them in his pocket. He got up and walked the floor, and it was while he was pacing thus that he paused before the long mirror set between the front windows and saw for the first time the reflection of his changed form.

Simon rubbed his eyes and blinked with unbelief.

This tall, muscular, youthful looking man with the ruddy cheeks and the bright eyes could not be Simon Pedrick. The Simon that he had always known was fat and unwieldy and pale.

But as he looked he saw that his clothes hung loosely on his firmly knitted frame, his cheeks were lean and his muscles were hard.

This loss of flesh might explain the feeling of vigor that possessed him nowadays. The muscles that had ached on the first days of his tramping were tireless now. He felt young—alive—and capable of almost anything.

And then his mind flew back to pretty Luella Finch and he wondered what Luella would say if she could see him now.

He was soon to know, for suddenly the door opened and Luella Finch stood there. Her glance wandered past him to search the room, then to come back to his changed face—his metamorphosed form with incredulous eyes.

Simon looked at her with kindling eyes. What was Luella doing here—Luella so fair, so desirable, Luella, whom he had believed to be far away in West Hollow?

"Simon?" she whispered. "Is it really you?"

"Yes," said Simon, suddenly conscious that Luella was glad to see him. "What are you doing here, Luella?"

"I came to visit my Aunt Lucetta," explained Luella, blushing rosy red and hanging her head. "Of course I hadn't the slightest idea that you were here and— Well, oh, Simon, why did you go away and not say goodbye to me?" she ended in a quivering voice.

"I didn't think you cared, Luella," said Simon slowly, and then as the color ebbed and flowed in her fair cheek he stepped forward and took her unresisting hands in his. "I love you, Luella," he said softly; "I've always loved you—ever since the days when we went to school together—but I've been afraid of you too. And then when Professor Tooley came to town I heard—I thought—well, I was jealous, and so I decided to come away and try and make a name that you would be proud of. If I go back home now—and I want to, Luella, because I can't go away and leave you after this—if I go back home now I shall always ly you?"

"Yes," said Simon, suddenly conscious that Luella was glad to see him. "What are you doing here, Luella?"

The Big Gunner
of the Malakoff

And the Sharpshooter
Who Supported
Him

By F. A. MITCHEL

One of the world's greatest sieges was that of Sebastopol, which occurred in 1854-5. The fall of the fortress marked the end of the Crimean war, in which the English, the French and the Turks on one side were pitted against the Russians on the other.

It was the failure of a bluff on the part of the British ambassador at St. Petersburg that caused thousands of men to kill each other and leave a multitude of widows and orphans to mourn for them. No better argument for a world's peace parliament can be derived from any event of the nineteenth century than this diplomatic blunder.

After a good deal of fighting the Russians shut themselves up in the stronghold of Sebastopol to resist the further progress of the allies and stood one of the longest sieges in history, extending over a period of eleven months.

The allies approached the fortress by that military process which is as old as war—a system of zigzag trenches. In these trenches, in heat and cold, in wind and rain, the soldiers worked their way toward the object of their attack. From the walls the heavy guns sent iron balls to plow up the earth about them and crush those who stood in their path. On both sides the sharpshooters were ever ready to pick off any one who exposed even an infinitesimal portion of his person.

Among the guns that did the most damage to the allies was one on that part of the fortress called the Malakoff. It was an enormous piece of ordnance, which acquired a name among the Russian soldiers taken from the czar who reigned at the time, Nicholas.

There was no trouble after that in getting Alexis to go to any point where his services were required. He had but one object—to kill as many as possible of those who had killed Ivan. Whatever they were, English, French or Turks, made no difference to him. He slew them wherever he could catch sight of them. And after Ivan's death he began to keep count of the number he killed. Every time he sent a bullet into a vital part of an enemy he would put his hat on the end of his rifle, hold it up above the works and get a hole in it.

The siege went on, the allies constantly working nearer. The nearer they came the more of them fell under Alexis' bullets, for being nearer, they were more easily distinguished. They were preparing for the final scene in the struggle, the storming of the Malakoff, and were too intent upon their work to take much care of their persons.

When a number of the allies had been killed at a single point sharpshooters would be ordered to observe whence the fire came and stop it. But Alexis was quick to see that his work had been noticed, for he was accustomed to keep continually feeling of his enemies by exposing some article to draw their fire. As soon as he held an article up on the muzzle of his rifle and a hole was made in it he knew it was time to go elsewhere.

As the siege proceeded the holes in Alexis' hat became very thick. When he went from one point to another those whom he joined began to make comments upon his headgear.

"It would make a good lantern," said one. "Why don't you put a candle in it?"

"What will you do when it is all shot away?" cried another.

"No danger of your head getting too hot," said a third.

Alexis never noticed these remarks. Indeed, there was a seriousness, a sadness about him that, so soon as the others noticed it, caused them to refrain from any further comment.

At last when the allies had approached near enough for their purpose and had finished their mining operations they blew up the walls and stormed the Malakoff. The garrison surrendered and the men marched out as prisoners of war. Among those who were in line was a woman in the dress of a Russian peasant. Perhaps in her changed dress she might not have been recognized had it not been for her sad face and hat full of bullet holes she carried in her hand. A crowd of her former companions gathered about her wondering.

"Who was the big gunner?" was the first question.

"My husband."

"How many holes are there in your hat?"

"A hundred and twenty-six."

"Each one a Frenchman?"

"Either a Frenchman, an Englishman or a Turk."

MEXICANS FIRE ON TEXAS TOWN

By Telegram to The Freeman.
El Paso, Texas, April 24.—Mexican Federal troops at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, began firing across the Rio Grande into Laredo, Texas, this afternoon, according to a dispatch received at Fort Bliss. Earlier in the day the Mexicans freed all the prisoners in the jail at Nuevo Laredo and ordered the American troops on duty at the bridge when they refused to let the convicts cross into American territory.

SHEET BREAD OF ASIA.

Used For Awnings, Blankets, Window-panes and Food.

Instead of baking bread in loaves, the inhabitants of Asia Minor, Arabia, Persia and the Tigris-Euphrates make it into sheets. These sheets are about forty inches wide and twice as long, and the natives make almost as much use of them as the American Indian does of birch bark. If they need an awning for protection against sun or rain they unwind a roll of this bread and carry it back and forth over a pole several times, making a canopy puts up a dog tent, for if it has a coat of almond oil or mutton tallow the bread is fairly waterproof.

It is a comical sight to see a teamster or camel driver of the Levant travel placidly through a heavy shower with a couple of yards of bread sheeting thrown over his shoulders and to see him tear off pieces here and there and chew on them if he feels hungry. The bread is made of durum wheat flour mixed with the pulp of sultana raisins, which gives it a sweet taste and a fragrance like that of honey.

The Arab uses his sheets of bread, which look like chamois leather, for a makeshift blanket, and it is said by travelers who have tried it that it keeps the heat in and the cold out almost as well as a real blanket. But some of the Russian engineers at work on the construction of the Transiberian railway did even better, for they made a paste of the bread by boiling several pieces and then stuck together two strips of the sheeting, each a meter wide by two meters long. Thus they manufactured a sleeping bag, and very comfortable one too.

The Turkish peasants use this flat bread for window panes, and in the bazaar the vendors of merchandise wind up pieces as a grocer does a paper cornucopia and use them to hold small amounts of nuts, Turkish candies or quares of sugar. Of course the purchaser eats the bag with its contents. The same shape the bread sheeting is used for holding the fruit drinks of the Bosphorus, but it will not stand up to liquids, even when it is coated with moud oil. Thanks to the raisin pulp, the bread is of remarkable elasticity and can be bent back and forth without cracking. It has actually been used for bookbinding.—Youth's Companion.

Woman's World

The Latest White House Bride a Social Favorite.

Photograph of Mr. McAdoo copyright by American Press Association.

SECRETARY McADOO AND THE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER.

The youngest daughter of President Wilson, chosen as a bride by William Gibbs McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, is one of the most attractive and democratic young women who ever graced the White House. Tall above the average, with a slender and willowy figure, she commands attention wherever she appears. Her blue eyes are fringed with heavy lashes and arched by dark brows. Her mouth is expressive, and she has the chin that characterizes all the president's daughters. Her complexion is a fine clear one, and her shapely head is crowned with masses of soft dark hair. Her smile is a singularly attractive one. She has a keen sense of humor.

She plays tennis, rides, drives, swims, rows and is fond of dancing. Like her sisters, she is a good linguist, speaking French and German fluently. From her mother she acquired a taste for art. She spent several years at an art school and paints very well. She has studied music and is a charming singer.

At Cornish, N. H., where the Wilsons spent last summer, she was the most popular member of the colony. Actively interested in the question of the protection of bird life, she lent her influence to making the performance of Percy Mackaye's bird masque "Sanctuary" an artistic and financial success. As Ornithologist, the bird spirit, she was much admired.

Fond of society and a diplomat in her dealings with it, there is no question that the bride of Secretary McAdoo will become a notable figure in Washington's official set.

CAMEO SHOE BUCKLES.

Novel Development of the Craze For This Jewelry.

The cameo plaque buckle has not fallen from grace, but merely descended to our shoes. It is such a beautiful thing that one would expect to see it at the throat or at most as a buckle at the waist. But it is really used wherever an artistic ornament will catch the high light.

It fastens the new capes and cloaks. It is attached to a sash end. The cameo ornament for a hat may prove on close inspection to be a cameo plaque buckle.

And now in special size and design we have the cameo buckle for shoes and slippers. Here it would reach the limit of its usefulness, one would fancy, but fashion strikes like lightning, and one never can tell.

The cameo plaque buckle is, however, both smart and of unusual beauty, and an instep seems very well designed for its display.

System For Cleanup Time.

Housecleaning ought to be more than the mere scrubbing and polishing of the house. It should be a time to take account of stock and to clear out the unserviceable or unnecessary.

Before the cleaning is really begun it would be a good plan to go all over the house and put aside what is no longer needed, what can be given or thrown away and what needs to be repaired.

If three large boxes are placed in an unused attic and labeled "Charity," "Junk" and "To Be Repaired" every one in the household may contribute to the contents, and all will know just where to put the various things.

Three Kinds of Starch.

In the laundry the woman who knows will provide three kinds of starch—wheat starch for general family use, cornstarch for extras, like collars and cuffs, and rice starch for laces, fine lingerie and lawns. In the proportion of two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch to one of wheat, the cooking done properly, collars, cuffs, shirt bosoms, etc., can be beautifully stiffened at home.

Cure For Yawning.

Do not make furious and painful efforts to keep yourself from yawning. Just press your thumb up into the underneath part of your chin, so that it appears to be pushing at the root of your tongue. You can do this while apparently leaning your head on your hand. No one will notice it, and it does away instantly with the desire to yawn.

Simon Pedrick's Discovery

Scientific Expedition That Ended In a Wedding

By JAMES CHANDLER

"What is the matter, Simon?" asked Mrs. Pedrick, glancing over her spectacles at her son's gloomily thoughtful countenance.

"Nothing, ma," returned Simon, heaving a deep sigh.

"Nothing? When you look like that? Simon Pedrick, you tell your mother what's troubling you, right off," she warned as she came around the table and laid a strong hand on his shoulder.

"Well," sighed Simon resignedly, "I don't seem to amount to much, ma. Of course, I know that I've got the best candy store and soda business in West Hollow, but it doesn't satisfy my ambitions."

Mrs. Pedrick shook the fat shoulder impatiently.

"Not satisfied?" she mimicked in an exasperated manner. "Ambitions! Humph! I'd like to know what more you can expect than to be a successful business man? I know what's the matter with you, Simon Pedrick. You're mooning over that silly Luella Finch, who hasn't got eyes for anybody except that new professor at the academy. My poor boy!"—her voice melting—"stop thinking about Luella Finch and all her high educated friends. There's plenty of girls in West Hollow who'd jump at a chance to marry you, Simon, if you'd only perk up and go after 'em."

"YOU SHAN'T STIR A STEP, SIMON," SHE FUMED.

Simon shrugged his shoulders. "I want to do something, be something—like him," he muttered moodily. "Like who? Professor Tooley?"

"Yes," nodded Simon.

"What has he ever done?" challenged Mrs. Pedrick.

"He's explored, and dug up old relics, and discovered things; once he went on a voyage to the arctic regions, and the man he was with, the head explorer, he discovered new land up there, and he named it after a king. Ma, I'd like to do something like that! Luella thinks Tooley's covered with glory because he was with the man who discovered the new land, and—"

"And named it after a king!" snorted Mrs. Pedrick. "And you call yourself an American citizen! Simon Pedrick, do you know that your ancestors on both sides fought for this country's freedom—and now you're wishing you could discover an island so's to name it after a king—leastways you're envious of the man who did it."

"Ma, you'd never understand," sighed Simon, rising and reaching for his hat. "Nobody understands me."

With which gloomy reflection Mr. Pedrick went out into the January twilight.

A week later the little village of West Hollow was stirred to its depths by an announcement in the weekly newspaper.

Said the West Hollow Echo:

Our well known neighbor, Mr. Simon Pedrick, starts this morning on a very unique expedition to the polar regions. Mr. Pedrick, who is the proprietor of the popular Eden Confectionery Parlors, tells us that it is his intention to walk to the farthest borders of British North America. This expedition will occupy all of a couple of years, and Mr. Pedrick expects to obtain much interesting material for a book which he will write on his return. The Eden Confectionery Parlors will in the absence of Mr. Pedrick be under the able management of William Hicks, who has had charge of the soda fountain for several years. We extend our hearty good wishes for the success of this expedition and await with interest Mr. Pedrick's forthcoming book.

In another paragraph the Echo announced that its readers would be favored with weekly letters from Simon Pedrick giving an interesting account of his trip to the north country.

If the neighbors of Simon Pedrick were amazed at his action his mother was inflamed to indignation by the startling scheme.

"You shan't stir a step, Simon," she fumed vainly. "I forbid it."

"Ma," said Simon firmly, "I'm forty years old. I've always minded you and been a good son. This is the thing I want to do most of all. I can afford it, and the store will take care of you comfortably. Now, don't say another word, because I've made up my mind, and I'm going."

When Simon Pedrick talked like his lamented father Mrs. Pedrick knew that further opposition was useless, so she buckled on her armor of helpfulness and sent her son away with plenty of warm clothing in his knapsack and her blessing ringing in his ears. Now that Simon had turned his face to the north and the weekly Echo printed paragraphs about his going and her neighbors marveled at this unexpected spirit of adventure that had cropped out in the staid Simon.

By the time Simon's first letter, sent from Upper Dale, twenty miles away, had been printed in the Echo his mother was in a mood to read the account of his trip with bated breath and shining eyes.

Now, on this crisp January morning, Simon Pedrick threw back his broad shoulders and took in deep breaths of the fine air.

Simon knew that he never felt better in his life, for once he was free from the restraint and the ever present responsibility of the ice cream parlors.

What Simon Pedrick did not know was that his too abundant flesh was melting from his frame, the life in the open air, the plain food and the long restful nights were doing their work and making Simon Pedrick into the man that nature had intended him to become. As the fat disappeared Simon became better looking, his fat gave place to firm, hardened muscles and a healthy color flamed his cheeks.

"Funny, how I almost forgot what I'm going after," mused Simon as he trudged along. "Seems 's if I'm just out for a walk and going right back home any minute—but maybe it'll be two years before I ever see West Hollow again. But when I do, well, maybe I'll have made myself famous enough to be called professor—hey, Professor Pedrick—I guess Luella Finch wouldn't snub me then."

Thinking about Luella Finch plunged Simon into deep gloom once more. This was nearing the end of his fourth week of tramping, and he was well over the line into the next state. That his enterprise was ridiculous under the circumstances was a matter that the village bred man did not consider. His desire to make a name to lay at the feet of fair Luella Finch quite outdistanced his common sense.

Now he was approaching a small hamlet perched on the mountain side, and as the sun was declining in the west Simon began to think about supper and a night's lodging.

A farm wagon piled high with cordwood creaked from a side road, and the red milted driver offered Simon a ride.

"I'm walking for my health," added Simon as he declined the offer with thanks—"that is, I find it healthy to walk, while at the same time I am exploring in the—er—er—interests of science."

"I see," said the rustic in an awed tone. "Then I reckon, as I can't be no help, I'll drive on. Good day, professor."

"Professor!" How sweet the word rang in Simon's ear!

"Good day!" he called heartily, and then, remembering his need of supper, he ran after the wagon and inquired how far he was from the village hotel.

"About two miles—only there ain't no hotel no more," informed the farmer. "It burned down last fall after the last summer boarder went, and Hi Carson, he don't reckon to build again before next spring."

"Where can I get a night's lodging?" asked Simon.

"Oh, I reckon Miss Lucetta Beals can accommodate you. She takes summer boarders, and now that there ain't no hotel no more she's been taking all the drummers and such like. It's the little white house up yonder on the hill—looks near by, but it's a mile and a half from here. You're welcome, professor!"

There it was again—Professor Pedrick! What would Luella Finch say now?

Simon was in a glow of delight as he tramped over the remaining miles that led to the cozy home of Lucetta Beals. Surrounded by resinous pines dappled with snow and with the sunshine burning against the western windows, the scene resembled a pretty Christmas card as Simon neared the front door.

A little white haired lady was tossing crumbs to a flock of gray birds hopping on the snow, and when she saw Simon and his knapsack she shook the last crumbs from her fingers and came to the top of the steps.

"I don't believe I know who you are," she ventured as Simon removed his hat before her.

"I'm Simon Pedrick of West Hollow, and I'm in search of a night's lodging," explained Simon, and then as a more definite introduction he produced the clipping from the West Hollow Echo describing his expedition and setting forth its purpose.

"Come right inside, Professor Pedrick," gurgled Miss Beals, immediately attaching the coveted title to Simon's name. "If you will put up with my poor fare for a night I shall be delighted to have you stop with me."

As Miss Lucetta Beals' "poor fare" consisted of fried chicken and cream biscuits, with honey and currant jelly, as well as spice cake and wonderfully fragrant tea, Simon settled down to an evening of perfect enjoyment. After the meal had been cleared away by a capable black woman the two repaired to the cozy sitting room, and Simon laid out his maps and outlined his projected journey into the cold north.

And in the midst of the interesting conversation there came the rumble of heavy wheels as a vehicle stopped before the gate. There was a loud "Whoa!" and then as the vehicle departed the sound of light footsteps on the porch and the sharp clang of the doorbell.

"The station stage," explained Miss Lucetta over her shoulder as she hurried out. "Somebody wanting a night's lodging, I expect, Della," to the woman in the kitchen; "put on the teakettle and get out the chicken again."

Then she darted into the front hall and Simon heard the door open and the sound of a girlish voice lifted in glad greeting. Miss Beals' shriek of surprise was drowned in hurried whispers, and finally there came the closing of another door on the opposite side of the hall.

Simon waited awhile; then he folded up his maps and put them in his pocket. He got up and walked the floor, and it was while he was pacing thus that he paused before the long mirror set between the front windows and saw for the first time the reflection of his changed form.

Simon rubbed his eyes and blinked with unbelief.

This tall, muscular, youthful looking man with the ruddy cheeks and the bright eyes could not be Simon Pedrick. The Simon that he had always known was fat and unwieldy and pale.

But as he looked he saw that his clothes hung loosely on his firmly knitted frame, his cheeks were lean and his muscles were hard.

This loss of flesh might explain the feeling of vigor that possessed him nowadays. The muscles that had ached on the first days of his tramping were tireless now. He felt young—alive—and capable of almost anything.

And then his mind flew back to pretty Luella Finch and he wondered what Luella would say if she could see him now.

He was soon to know, for suddenly the door opened and Luella Finch stood there. Her glance wandered past him to search the room, then to come back to his changed face—his metamorphosed form with incredulous eyes.

Simon looked at her with kindling eyes. What was Luella doing here—Luella so fair, so desirable; Luella, whom he had believed to be far away in West Hollow?

"Simon?" she whispered. "Is it really you?"

"Yes," said Simon, suddenly conscious that Luella was glad to see him. "What are you doing here, Luella?"

"I came to visit my Aunt Lucetta," explained Luella, blushing rosy red and hanging her head. "Of course I hadn't the slightest idea that you were here and— Well, oh, Simon, why did you go away and not say goodbye to me?" she ended in a quavering voice.

"I didn't think you cared, Luella," said Simon slowly, and then as the color ebbed and flowed in her fair cheek he stepped forward and took her unresisting hands in his. "I love you, Luella," he said softly. "I've always loved you—ever since the days when we went to school together—but I've been afraid of you too. And then when Professor Tooley came to town I heard—I thought—well, I was jealous, and so I decided to come away and try and make a name that you would be proud of. If I go back home now—and I want to, Luella, because I can't go away and leave you after this—if I go back home now I shall always be plain Simon Pedrick, and I did want to be called Professor Pedrick for your sake," he ended wistfully.

Luella hugged him silently, and then she turned a melting blue eye upon him and whispered:

"I shall give you a much better title than that, Simon. Listen: Dear Simon, Simon, dear—there! Isn't that better than Professor Pedrick?"

Miss Lucetta Beals darted her head into the sitting room and withdrew it hastily.

"Della," she whispered to the black cook, "my niece is engaged to Professor Pedrick!"

"I have every reason to believe so," concluded Lucetta happily.

To this day West Hollow folks tell about Simon Pedrick's north polar expedition, which suddenly ended in a wedding fifty miles from its starting place. And although Simon never attained the honors he craved before he was sure of Luella's love, it is gratifying to know that he was perfectly satisfied to be the husband of Luella and the proprietor of the Eden Confectionery Parlors.

The czar not only decorated her, but gave her a pension that enabled her to live comfortably for the rest of her life, and when her children grew to be men and women they were all given government positions.

THE GUNNER AND HIS PROTECTING SHARP-SHOOTER.

They called the gun Old Nicholas. If it had belonged to the English the name Old Nick would have meant more than it did in Russian.

The gunner who served Old Nicholas corresponded in size to his piece. As the gun was one of the biggest in the Russian service, so was Ivan Yasnovsky, the gunner who served it, one of the biggest men in the army. He was six feet four inches high and massive in proportion. Of course he had a number of assistants, but he was plenty strong enough to put in the ponderous balls which it sent down among the trenches. And when left alone there was no diminution in the frequency of his shots.

A more important auxiliary to Ivan Yasnovsky than gun servers was the sharpshooters who when those of the enemy became too troublesome picked them off one by one until Ivan could show a bit of his person without getting a bullet in it. Half a dozen of these sharpshooters were detailed to stand by the gunner of Old Nicholas, but as the siege proceeded some of them were picked off, while others were needed at other points. At last the number was reduced to one.

This single sharpshooter was called Alexis Galleff. Though a man of middle height, beside the ponderous Ivan he looked small. He was especially marked for being beardless, and this, too, was in contrast with the gunner's bristling whiskers and mustachios. Then, too, Ivan was dark, while Alexis was light. It was remarkable how that soft blue eye of the sharpshooter would take sight at an Englishman, a Frenchman or a Turk and at a flash from his rifle the object would sink down under the blight of death.

No such execution was done by any two persons in the Russian army as by this gunner and his protecting sharpshooter. Whether it was the association under constant danger that drew them together no one knew. Certain it was that they were devoted to each other. Alexis was constantly on

BALOPTICON LECTURE.

On Egypt and the Beginnings of Our Civilization.

On Sunday evening, April 26, the pastor of the Rondout Presbyterian Church will give a Balopticon lecture, illustrating by 100 beautiful views the story of the beginnings of our civilization, picturing the beginnings of art, husbandry, the development of architecture, navigation, writing, book making, religion. The peculiar massiveness of Egyptian architecture, the picturesqueness of its scenery and the abundance of the remains of early human effort to be found in that country render a study of its monuments of human progress most instructive and attractive, particularly when we consider the contribution of Egypt to the Hebrew and Christian faiths in the training of Moses and the sheltering of the infant Jesus. Pictures will show a monument telling the story of a seven years' famine in Egypt, pictures of paintings and works of art 3,000 years old and even a picture of the statue of a being who reigned 5,000 years ago.

MILK TEETH

The temporary or deciduous teeth of the child are more important than the parent usually appreciates.

There are ten of these Milk Teeth in each jaw—six fronts and four backs. At first these Milk Teeth have long roots that set firmly in the alveolar processes of the jaws. These roots are absorbed at certain ages in the child's growth and the permanent teeth are erupted, or cut, to take their place.

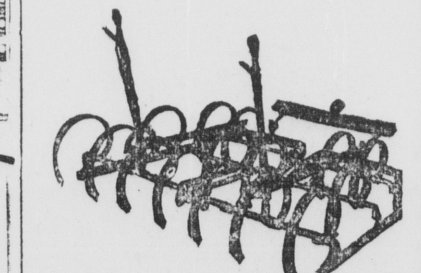

If all this process is gone through properly, there is no suffering from toothache or sore mouth—and the child will have a beautiful set of permanent teeth.

Through sympathy for neglected mouths of children, we have decided to treat all "Milk Teeth" at exactly half price. We want to come in contact with these children and explain to them the importance of the tooth brush and the care of the mouth and teeth.

A Return Engagement.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Dutch Church will give an entertainment in the chapel on Wednesday evening, April 29, at 8 o'clock. The first part of the program will consist of musical numbers; the second part the "Old Maid's Association," which scored such a tremendous success in the Baptist Church a few weeks ago. Everyone should see the wonderful change that takes place when the elderly maidens are transformed into beautiful young girls through the efforts of the professor and his magic machine.

SPECIAL SALE!

For Friday, April 24, and Saturday, April 25

About this time of the year the large cloak and suit houses are winding up their Spring and Summer business and are getting ready for Fall trade.

They get all short ends together and make up the whole lot into suits and coats and close them out at a striking low figure, and they are then ready full blast for Fall.

Now, who do you think they call upon to dispose of them?

Just such concerns like the Up-to-Date Company, who can use the entire lot and for the good, old SPOT CASH. Ah, that's what counts.

But you can just make up your mind that they have to get down to the rock bottom when we get together with them. That's what occurred last week.

Our buyer was in New York and picked up 600 suits and 875 coats from one of the finest houses in New York city, and same will be on sale on the days mentioned.

MILK TEETH

The temporary or deciduous teeth of the child are more important than the parent usually appreciates.

There are ten of these Milk Teeth in each jaw—six fronts and four backs. At first these Milk Teeth have long roots that set firmly in the alveolar processes of the jaws. These roots are absorbed at certain ages in the child's growth and the permanent teeth are erupted, or cut, to take their place.

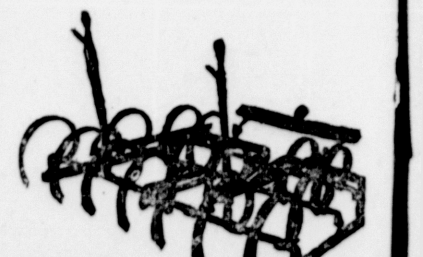

If all this process is gone through properly, there is no suffering from toothache or sore mouth—and the child will have a beautiful set of permanent teeth.

Through sympathy for neglected mouths of children, we have decided to treat all "Milk Teeth" at exactly half price. We want to come in contact with these children and explain to them the importance of the tooth brush and the care of the mouth and teeth.

Open evenings to 9. Sundays 9 to 10.
